General Grant's Condition Slowly Growing Worse

DEFAULTER HIBBS MAY ESCAPE

June Report of the Department of Agriculture—Railroad Information—Departments of the West—June Acreage and Condition

NEW YORK, June 10.—[Special.]—General Grant passed an [illegible] ... that it was ... because ... [illegible] ... four weeks ... is not ... [illegible]

NEW YORK ... [illegible] ... for the first time since he was taken ill, a great swelling, bigger than a man's fist, almost two inches big, in fact, has appeared on his neck under the right ear. His face has lost all of its natural fleshiness, but his body is frightfully emaciated, and his long bony wrists and hands betray the fact. Every now and then, as he talks, his throat becomes filled with discharge from a sore in the back of his mouth, and he has to stop talking and rid himself of the troublesome accumulation. It is supposed the swelling on the neck is the sympathetic result of trouble in his throat. The doctors still insist that the general is slowly dying of the consequences of the cancerous growth there.

GENERAL GRANT'S BOOK.

NEW YORK, June 10.—[Special.]—Mr. Webster, one of the publishers who have charge of Grant's book, declined to speak of the manner in which the public became acquainted with extracts from the book and beyond stating that he made them for his canvassers he would say no more. He confirms the report that the entire book is completed, but said that Grant had not yet seen the last of the proofs. "I wanted to call the book 'Personal Memoirs of General U. S. Grant, written by Himself,'" said Webster, "but the general cut the title down to its present shape, 'Personal Memoirs of U. S. Grant.'" The first volume will be issued in December, the second in March.

LOGAN VISITS GRANT.

NEW YORK, June 10.—General Logan spent three hours today with General Grant to-day and lunched with the family.

A KANSAS CITY SENSATION.

KANSAS CITY, June 10.—A sensation in church and society was created here to-day, by publication in the Times of legal documents and interviews from Rochester, New York, going to show that Rev. Father Henry D. Jardine, rector of St Mary's Episcopal church of this city, served a term of two years in Monroe penitentiary, New York, having been sentenced when he was aged 17, for burglarizing the store of his brother in law, Mr. Pritchard of Rochester, in 1860. A libel for $50,000 has been some time pending against the Times for publishing certain charges of immorality against Jardine. Father Jardine was not accessible to-day, but was interviewed by a reporter this evening and did not deny that he had served a term in the penitentiary in his early life. The vestrymen of St. Mary's are in session to-night.

SUIT TO RECOVER MONEY.

NEW YORK, June 10.—Trial of the suit of Amanda Delphine, formerly known to the stage as Blanche Vedea, against Jacob R. Shepherd of Peruvian claim fame, and the Washington coal company of Virginia, was begun to-day. In her bill plaintiff claims that Shepherd, in the guise of her attorney for the raising of a loan of $10,000 on some coal lands and while she was sick procured her signature to papers giving him power as the character of which she did not understand. Shepherd, in his answer, claimed ... the ... power as her solicitor, and that the suit was in the nature of blackmail. He appeared as his own attorney. Mrs. Delphine made various personal accusations against Shepherd during her testimony.

CATTLE MEN IN COUNCIL.

DENVER, June 10.—A meeting of the Colorado Cattle Growers' association is in session here, for the purpose of discussing the question of establishing a cattle trail across the state, from Texas to Wyoming. Prominent cattle men are present from all parts of the state. It is understood that an effort will be made to-morrow to establish a trail through the state near the Kansas line, connecting with the Dallas trail. This the Las Animas county stockmen will vigorously oppose, and serious trouble will possibly result.

ALEXANDER H. STEPHENS' REMAINS.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 10.—This morning a special train bearing the remains of Alexander H. Stephens, accompanied by an escort and many citizens, left Atlanta for Crawfordsville, where the body, which has been removed from the vault in this city, will be laid in its permanent resting place at Liberty hall. The funeral services will take place at Crawfordsville this afternoon, when General Robert Toombs, a lifelong friend of Mr. Stephens, will make an address.

CHANGE IN STEERAGE RATES.

NEW YORK, June 10.—At the recent conference of steamship passenger agents it was decided to increase steerage rates between New York and Liverpool, but from Liverpool here no change will be made. The White Star, Cunard, Inman and Anchor lines will charge $20, an advance of $5, while the Guion, State and American lines will charge $19. This will go into effect on the 15th inst.

THE IRON WORKERS' STRIKE.

PITTSBURG, June 10.—The Amalgamated association reports another signature to their scale to-day, the Akron Iron Company of Akron, Ohio. The firm employs about 3000 men. The plate mill of the Sligo iron works was running to-day with non-union workmen.

GAMBLING HOUSES CLOSED.

PITTSBURG, June 10.—All the gambling houses were closed to-night by order of the mayor, who says gamblers from Chicago and western cities, under the impression that this is their paradise, have been flocking here, and he wants it stopped.

POOL SELLERS RAIDED.

BOSTON, June 10.—All the establishments in this city engaged in selling pools on base ball and other sporting events were raided this afternoon, and all their appurtenances seized. All persons selling pools were arrested.

A STRIKE ENDED.

DENVER, June 10.—The strike on the Denver and Rio Grande is apparently at an end, resulting in complete victory for Receiver Jackson's management. The road is now in perfect working order in every department.

NOMINATED FOR SENATOR.

CONCORD, N. H., June 10.—Democratic members of the legislature, in caucus to-night, nominated Hon. Harry Bingham of Littleton as candidate for United States senator.

CRIMINAL CALENDAR.

BLEW HIMSELF UP.

NEW YORK, June 10.—Three startling explosions which have just occurred have completely blown up Renson's liquor saloon, on Thames street. Debris was hurled in all directions, and some half dozen people were badly cut and hurt. Joseph Renson, owner of the place, was found beneath the debris in the cellar, terribly burnt and mangled. He had sat on a twenty-five pound keg of powder and exploded it. He had two such kegs, with which he told the city marshal he intended to blow up himself and his place, because everybody was after him. A razor was found, covered with blood, by his side. The fire brigade quickly extinguished the flames. Renson is at the hospital, suffering terrible agony, and slowly dying. Delirium tremens is given as the cause for his novel yet determined act.

SALVATION ARMY MOBBED.

CLEVELAND, June 10.—Over 1000 men and boys made a raid upon a Salvation army at Akron last night, pelting the soldiers with mud and stones, tearing their flags to pieces and destroying their drums. Several of the women soldiers were assaulted and quite badly injured before the police dispersed the mob. No arrests.

A PARRICIDE'S CONFESSION.

CINCINNATI, June 10.—Schneider, who is in the Hamilton, Ohio, jail, sentenced to be hanged June 19, for killing his mother, made a confession to-day to the jailer and his spiritual adviser. He said his mother had threatened to poison his wife and had asked him to let her live with him. He agreed to let her live with him half the time, but at supper a quarrel arose and his mother [illegible] to be taken to the railroad station. On the way she said that if he wished she was dead she would have a home. This maddened him and he struck her on the head with a stone, and carried her off and buried her. ... [illegible] ... and no one else knew of it.

WASHINGTON NEWS ITEMS.

THE DEFAULTER HIBBS MAY ESCAPE.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The post office inspectors who have been pursuing Hibbs, defaulting postmaster of Lewiston, Idaho, have discovered that he is at Farewell, a town 100 miles distant from Victoria, British Columbia. As he is accompanied by his family there seems to be little doubt of being able to arrest him. It is feared that the attempt to effect extradition will be involved in difficulty and some delay. He could not be held for embezzlement, as that offense is not covered by existing treaties with British Columbia, and forgery, as he was acting in the capacity of postmaster when he drew the fraudulent money orders. It is hoped he may be held upon a charge of stealing letters addressed to another person, but the point involves some question. The letters Hibbs took from the pouches were addressed to one "Davis," which was a name ... for ... himself.

GENERAL BUCKNER TO BE MARRIED.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—[Special.]—General Simon Bolivar Buckner, the confederate general who surrendered Fort Donelson to General Grant, passed through this city yesterday on his way to Richmond, where he will to-day be married to Miss Claiborne, one of the most noted of Virginia beauties, and who is related to nearly all of the leading families of the south.

RICHMOND, Va., June 10.—General Simon B. Buckner of Kentucky was married here this evening to Miss Delia Claiborne, daughter of Major John A. Claiborne, one of Richmond's most prominent and estimable citizens. General Buckner was a confederate officer. The bride has been one of the leading belles of Richmond society, and is a relative on both sides of General George Washington and his wife. General and Mrs. Buckner left to-night on the northern bound train.

MORE ABOUT LOGAN'S VISIT.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—[Special.]—General Logan called at the White house yesterday morning. His visit caused as much of a sensation as did that of Blaine. Democrats were amazed at the cordial reception which the president gave him, and were compelled to wait half an hour while Cleveland gave Logan a private interview. The visit was merely an interchange of courtesy between victorious and defeated candidates on the national tickets. During the interval interview a salute of old soldiers in honor of General Logan was progressing in the White house lot fronting the library window. Morrison, who called about the same time, did not receive as much consideration as Logan did.

CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Civil service examinations will be held as follows: For mechanical and topographic draughtsmen and copyists of drawings, at the civil service rooms, Washington, Tuesday, June 0; for proof readers, at the same place, Wednesday, July 1, and for assistant examiners for the patent office, Thursday, July 2. Examinations of all the above named classes will also be held July 2 at Boston, Albany, New York and Philadelphia. Similar examinations will be held at several points not yet fixed in the west.

YELLOW FEVER VESSELS EXPECTED.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The Marine Hospital bureau has information that vessels supposed to be infected with yellow fever have cleared from Cienfuegos for Delaware Breakwater and are due at the latter place about this date. The quarantine officer at the breakwater has been notified, and a revenue cutter from Philadelphia has been ordered to intercept the vessels upon their arrival.

MRS. GRANT'S GIFTS.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Colonel L. N. Batchelder, deputy quartermaster general, left Washington last night for New York, to receive and bring to Washington the testimonials and presents received by General Grant at home and abroad, which were presented to this government by Mrs. Grant. It has not yet been decided where the presents will be placed permanently.

BAD NEWS FOR DEMOCRATS.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—First Assistant Postmaster General Hay says he is unaware of any prerogative by which senators may dictate appointments of postmasters, and while he would give great weight to their suggestions he would appoint a postmaster opposed in politics to the administration if a majority of the patrons of the office favored such appointment.

JUNE CROP REPORT.

Reliable Information Regarding the Winter Wheat Acreage and Condition.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The June report of the department of agriculture will make an increase in the cotton area of 5 to 6 per cent. The general average is 92, which is higher than in the three preceding years in June.

The condition of winter wheat is reported lower than ever before in June. The general percentage has declined from 70 in May to 62. The averages of the principal states are: New York 91, Pennsylvania 67, Ohio 56, Michigan 94, Indiana 63, Illinois 40, Missouri 54, Kansas 56, and California 58. In some states there has been a greater loss of area than was anticipated in previous reports. The average yield will evidently be less than ten bushels per acre. The probable product in winter wheat states, according to these returns, is reduced to about 207,000,000 bushels, but none of the territories are included in the winter wheat area.

SPRING WHEAT.

The report of spring wheat is more favorable. The disposition last autumn to reduce its breadth, on account of the low price, was checked by loss of winter wheat area, and later to British-Russian war rumors. Substantially the same area has been seeded as last year, about 11,000,000 acres, in northern New England, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska and all the territories. The percentage of last year's area is 96 in Wisconsin, 99 in Minnesota, 102 in Iowa, 98 in Nebraska and 103 in Dakota. The condition of spring wheat is 9 , and indicates a crop of about 153,000,000 bushels. The average for Wisconsin is 88, Minnesota 94, Iowa 100, Nebraska 102 and Dakota 101. The present report, therefore, indicates a wheat crop of 360,000,000 bushels, 23,000,000 bushels smaller than that of 1881.

The general condition of rye is 82. The area of barley is nearly the same as in 1884, and the average condition is 8 . The acreage of oats has increased 4 per cent, and the average condition is 94. Corn will be reported in July, but voluntary reports indicate an increase of area.

RAILROAD NOTES.

DECLARATION OF FORFEITURE.

NEW YORK, June 10.—The Diario Official, of Mexico, for May 30, received in this city to-day, contains a copy of "the declaration of forfeiture," issued in the name of the president, by Senor Fernandez, secretary of public works, to representatives of the Mexican Southern railway company. This declares that the concession granted to the Mexican Southern railway May 17, 1883, has lapsed owing to nonfulfillment of the terms upon which it was granted, these being that 250 kilometres of road should be built in the first two years, and 2000 kilometres in each succeeding two years till the road was completed. It declares, also, in accordance with the terms of the concession, that the $50,000 deposited by the company in the national Monte de Piedad, as a guaranty of the fulfillment of the contract, is forfeited. This concession was granted to Senor Ramon Fernandez, as representative of Jay Gould and General Grant.

GLADSTONE'S DEFEAT.

An Account of the Wild Scenes of Tuesday Night.

NO SYMPATHY FOR THE MINISTRY

Marquis Hartington to have a Conference with the Queen—Everything still Involved in Doubt—Foreign Notes.

NEW YORK, June 10.—[Special.]—The Post's London special gives a graphic recital of the scene in the house last night. It says the Gladstone ministry was wrecked by a union of class interests, party hatred and [illegible] influences. For eight hours the debate on the Hicks Beach amendment to the budget dragged along, brewers, distillers and publicans ... after ... for ... whisky ... while the conservatives and the Irishmen were struggling for the vote, on which they were sure to beat the government. So certain, in fact, were they that they were then organizing a private celebration. As the hour for the division approached the excitement increased, ... When Gladstone rose to close the debate at 10 o'clock, the house was so crowded that many members were unable to find seats. Not for a long time has Gladstone spoken with so much vigor, so much of his old fire. There was not the slightest interruption, in spite of his hits ... at the opposition. The latter seemed completely cowed. No doubt Gladstone knew perfectly well what the vote was going to be, and this added sharpness to his attack. His defence of the budget was masterly.

GLADSTONE'S CLOSING REMARKS.

The climax came when, after dwelling in an earnest ... on the greatness of the amount ... for £11,000,000 for the defense of the empire, he paused, waved his hand almost in the faces of the leaders on the opposition bench and added with crescendo scorn: "And the regular opposition is to-all the regular opposition is ... the regular opposition is ... the regular opposition is constitutionally determined to refuse the money." Prolonged cheering and a storm of laughter followed.

The scene when the result was announced beggars description. The whole house was in a fever of excitement. When the tellers approached the speaker, Lord Randolph Churchill was the first to catch sight of the paper in the hands of a conservative whip. He sprang to his feet with a shout, and instantly deafening cheers, shouts and yells broke out, which lasted five minutes. Every time there was a lull Irish members could be heard shouting "Spencer" and "Remember Miles Joyce." Churchill and Irishmen were on benches, waving their hats; the liberals were silent and gloomy, and Gladstone was quietly writing on his knee, his regular daily report to the queen.

LONDON WILD WITH EXCITEMENT.

The Liquor Men Uproariously Celebrating their Great Victory.

NEW YORK, June 10.—[Special.]—The Sun's London cablegram says: London is seething with political excitement, and the great victory of the publicans is being uproariously celebrated in every public house in the metropolis. The house of commons was crowded this evening, with both members and spectators, and if the vote had been repeated the government would have been sustained, owing to the presence of large numbers of liberals who were sulking Monday night, and who by their absence turned what they meant for a gentle admonition to Mr. Gladstone into a crushing defeat of their party. It is now generally believed that the conservatives will accept office, and that their policy, at least on home affairs, during the next six months will be one of defense and inactivity. They will make no effort to renew the Irish crimes act, on the plea that it could not be passed by the present parliament in the face of opposition, and their main object will be to provide material for assaults on the liberals in the coming campaign, and to keep their own armor as whole as may be. It is probable that the general election will be postponed from November until January, which will give both sides more time to adjust themselves to the changed condition of affairs.

THE NEW MINISTRY.

As to the personnel of the new ministry nothing appears to be settled, except that Lord Salisbury will be premier and Lord Randolph Churchill will have a place in the cabinet. The illness of Sir Stafford Northcote comes at an unfortunate time, as it will prevent him from accepting a portfolio that will be undoubtedly offered him.

Gladstone will have to make a journey to Scotland to tender his resignation and that of his colleagues to the queen, as she is still at Balmoral castle. Some critics think her absence from England at this crisis is ill timed and that she should return to Windsor.

It is impossible to find a single sincere mourner over the fall of the Gladstone ministry. Its occurrence has given rise to grave fears as to the future of the Afghan question, and of other foreign complications, but for the deposed ministers themselves there are few words of regret or sympathy. Their downfall is universally regarded as the subject of jest and satire, in view of the fact that, having survived many motions of censure on the gravest subjects, they are at last compelled to succumb by the offended publicans.

CRISIS NOTES.

The Queen Summons Marquis Hartington to Balmoral—Editorial Comment—Etc.

The queen has summoned Marquis Hartington, secretary of state for war, to Balmoral castle. It is not known whether he is summoned as a representative of Gladstone, or is to be invited to form a new cabinet. Hartington seems in no hurry to comply with the summons, and has not yet started for Scotland.

A private deputation of conservative members of parliament waited upon Sir Stafford Northcote and Marquis Salisbury to-day, and urged them to refuse office. Marquis Salisbury stated that if the queen called them they must form a government. He would support Northcote as premier, and he expected the queen's demands would place Sir Stafford in that position.

THE PLAN ABANDONED.

LONDON, June 11.—Marquis Hartington had arranged to go to Balmoral last evening, in place of Gladstone, but the plan was abandoned. The fact that Hartington remains in London is regarded as an indication of the early arrival of the queen.

The daily News this morning expresses a hope that the cabinet will persist in resigning, adding that a few months of tory rule will insure a liberal triumph in the general election, and be better than fifty discourses of superiority of liberal principles.

LORD CHURCHILL IN THE WAY.

LONDON, June 10.—The chief difficulty encountered by the conservatives in their discussions regarding the formation of a ministry, says the Pall Mall Gazette, is the problem what to do with Lord Randolph Churchill. He claims to have done much in the work of destroying the liberal government, and demands his share of the spoils. It is apparent that the older tories regard him as troublesome and somewhat dangerous to have around in the national councils. The Gazette intimates that a polite effort will be made to get rid of him. If the conservatives form a government he will, it is stated, be requested to go to Ireland, if not to succeed Earl Spencer as lord lieutenant, then as chief secretary. The sort of talk which is already being applied to the young man is something like this: "You certainly prefer duty to mere ambition, therefore you should adopt this difficult and dangerous post. Dare you accept it? If you accept, then whether you succeed or fail, you will at least prove that you possess great qualities of intrepidity and self-sacrifice, which are among the greatest gifts possessed by popular statesmen." Lord Randolph is very susceptible to flattery, and he might prove a great Irish governor.

THE QUEEN TO RETURN.

LONDON, June 10.—An official order was issued to-night closing Windsor castle to the public after to-morrow. This is a sure sign of the advent of the queen. As the Windsor is only thirty minutes by rail from London the return of her majesty will greatly expedite business at the present crisis.

THE STANDARD'S ADVICE.

LONDON, June 10.—The Standard in an editorial says: "The duty of the conservatives is clear. If Gladstone insists on resigning the opposition is bound to accept the duty of government. We trust they will not hesitate, though ... dangers have to be faced with so unpromising a ..."

GLADSTONE STILL IN LONDON.

LONDON, June 11.—Gladstone has not yet left for Balmoral to place his resignation in the hands of the queen, as stated in the Standard this morning. He is still in London. Earl Spencer has left Dublin, having left London after the cabinet meeting yesterday.

LONDON STOCK BOARD.

LONDON, June 11.—Stocks are quiet. Home funds steady and foreign securities, including Russian, better.

12:30 P. M.—Consols for money, 99 5-16 to ..., account ...

4 P. M. Consols ...

ENGLAND.

CONTESTED PEERAGE.

LONDON, June 10.—The committee of the house of lords on privileges, in consideration of the claim of Major Maitland to the Lauderdale peerage. Major Maitland in his petition to the lords, says he is the heir of the fourth son of the sixth earl of Lauderdale, who, it is alleged, married Mary MacAdams in New York in 1772, two days before her death. Mary MacAdams had borne three sons to the fourth son of the sixth earl and it is contended by the petitioner, Major ... that this marriage legitimized the offspring. Sir James Maitland, descendant of the sixth son of the sixth earl of Lauderdale, contests the claim of Major Maitland to the peerage. United States Minister Phelps, United States Senator Edmunds, and Messrs. Fowler, Stephens, Nash, and Clarence Cary will give testimony concerning the law of marriages as it existed in the American colonies in 1772.

WOLSELEY DENOUNCES THE EVACUATION OF THE SOUDAN.

LONDON, June 10.—A sensation has been caused by the publication of Lord Wolseley's dispatches denouncing the evacuation of the Soudan. He warns the government that on withdrawal from Dongola the whole province will be given up to anarchy, and will revert from civil rule to barbarism. Withdrawal, he says, will not avert a struggle. El Mahdi, in a few years will attack Egypt. Years of internal trouble in Egypt have been a burden and a strain on her military resources. The best policy, in both a military and a financial point of view, would be to attack El Mahdi at Khartoum.

A NEW KNIGHT CREATED.

LONDON, June 10.—The queen has created Lord Wolseley a knight of the order of St. Patrick in succession to Lord O'Hagan.

PRINCESS BEATRICE'S MARRIAGE.

LONDON, June 10.—Princess Beatrice's marriage is officially announced to take place by the 23d of next month.

LOWELL SAILS FOR HOME.

LONDON, June 10.—James Russell Lowell sailed to-day for the United States, aboard the steamer Scythia.

CANADA.

THE ALASKAN BOUNDARY.

OTTAWA, June 10.—Unless some preventive measures are taken, international complications may at any moment arise between the Canadian and the United States governments, over the undefined boundary line between Alaska and British Columbia. Advices received here to-day from British Columbia state that miners working locations in the Yukon country and on the Juneau river are unable to tell whether they are taking out gold in the United States or in British territory. The Dominion government, while admitting the necessity which exists for a definite boundary being established, to avert international difficulties, represents that the work at the very lowest estimate would involve an outlay of at least $4,000,000, a debt which at the present moment they could not well afford to incur.

FUNERAL CEREMONIES OF ARCHBISHOP BOURGET.

MONTREAL, June 10.—The remains of Archbishop Bourget are lying in state at Sault au Recollet ... guarded by ... a guard of honor. On Thursday will be celebrated a solemn libera at which over fifty bishops and 1000 priests from Canada and the United States are expected to be present. The remains will then be elevated to the archbishop's throne and carried to Notre Dame church.

LATEST FROM GENERAL MIDDLETON.

WINNIPEG, June 10.—Latest advices from General Middleton's force are dated June 6. It was then forty miles northeast of Pitt, and eight from Big Bear's supposed locality. The Indians are reported making rafts to cross Turtle lake, but there is no accurate report of their position. It seems Middleton went in a wrong direction, being misled by government maps, and has lost valuable time.

TO TAX CHINESE.

OTTAWA, June 10.—In the commons to-night Chapleau, secretary of state, gave notice of a resolution to be introduced declaring it expedient to impose a tax of $50 on every person of Chinese origin entering the dominion, and providing that no vessel carrying Chinese immigrants shall carry more than one immigrant for every fifty tons of the vessel's tonnage.

FRANCE.

FRANCE DISTRUSTFUL.

PARIS, June 10.—The Republique Francaise, speaking of the resignation of the Gladstone cabinet, says: "Europe must distrust a ministry where the wisdom of Sir Stafford Northcote can be annulled by the passionate imprudence of the earl of Salisbury, and the petulance of Lord Randolph Churchill, when foreign questions demand so much coolness and tact."

A NAPOLEONIC PROCLAMATION.

PARIS, June 10.—Supporters of Victor Napoleon, son of Prince Napoleon, have issued an election manifesto. It proclaims no community with revolutionists, and appeals for support to all who are opposed to the republic, promising them a fair representation of the electoral list.

RUSSIA.

NIHILISTS DIVIDED IN OPINION.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 10.—Police state that the Nihilists of this city are seriously divided in opinion as to the best means of continuing their agitation. A majority of the brotherhood is believed to be in favor of abandonment of terrorism and making an effort to effect revolution by pacific means.

SPAIN.

VESSELS TO BE QUARANTINED.

GIBRALTAR, June 10.—Owing to the reappearance of cholera in Spain the authorities here have ordered that vessels arriving from Spanish ports shall be subject to a quarantine of five days.

THE SOUDAN.

REFUGEES ARRIVING AT DONGOLA.

DONGOLA, June 10.—Eleven thousand refugees have arrived here from Khartoum and Berber. The Mahdi is allowing Egyptian prisoners to depart.

PORTUGAL.

QUARANTINE ORDERED.

LISBON, June 10.—The government has ordered quarantine to be enforced against all arrivals by way of Gibraltar.

Action of the Senate.

New York Times Mugwump.

It is reported that the republican senators are discussing a plan of common action regarding the confirmation of President Cleveland's nominations in the places of officers removed for "offensive partisanship." It is in effect that no nomination will be confirmed of men who can be shown to be themselves "offensive partisans." When the senate meets, the two parties in most of the states will have passed through an electoral canvass, and in some states one of much heat and interest. If it be found that the new appointees in such states have been guilty of the same faults as those for which their predecessors were removed, it is not easy to see how the senate can vote to confirm them. In fact, the position in which the president would find himself would be so weak and so embarrassing that he would have the greatest possible inducement to escape from it by promptly removing the men who had abused his confidence by their partisanship. A much safer and more effective policy would be to refuse to appoint men who are or are likely to be partisans. Where this has been done there will be no trouble. And this principle can be most thoroughly and easily applied by extending the civil service rules, which is logically and practically the action to which the president must finally resort.

PACIFIC COAST.

The San Francisco Fruit Market Overstocked

ANOTHER RATE WAR PROBABLE.

Customs Inspector Killed by Apaches—A Montana Man's bad Record—The Sherman Party at Port Townsend.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—[Special.]—The Evening Post in a long article on the California fruit market, says: At the present time the local market is heavily overstocked with fruit, and there does not appear to be any outlet that will give relief. Cherries sold last week and week before for twenty cents per box, or but a fraction over the cost of picking, packing, freight and commission, and during several days tons of fruit were dumped overboard, because there was no sale for it. The canneries have got more fruit than they can handle, and more than they can sell. Fully one-third of the entire pack of last year remains unsold in the hands of canners, or to put it more definitely, the stock ... is twice as great as in the previous year, yet the past year was the most favorable ever known for the sale of California canned goods. It is clear that fruit growers cannot look for any greatly increased demand at the canneries. The only other outlet, then, when the local market is supplied, is a market for our green fruit in the east, but as soon as the eastern market was perfectly tested it was found that the demand there was very limited. The demand for California green fruit is limited to a time before eastern fruit is ripe, and that demand is confined to people of wealth. Early fruit and vegetables are regarded as an extravagant luxury all over the east. There is small demand in all large cities, but it does not amount to more than three or four carloads a day, and then only in early summer.

ANOTHER WAR OF RATES PROBABLE.

[Special.]—Mr. Bedell, passenger agent of the Lake Shore railroad, has withdrawn from the Pacific Coast Passenger Agents' Association. He states that he will pay passengers a rebate of $7 over his line. The association tried to hold Mr. Bedell to the rules till next Saturday, when his notice of withdrawal will take effect under the agreement, but he refused to remain in the organization, and offered his cut to anyone before the expiration of his notice. The other agents had only one course to pursue, and they decided upon that. A resolution was unanimously adopted releasing all agents of trunk lines east of Chicago from the rules of the association. There is no obstacle now to cutting, and it is very probable that a war of rates will follow.

CUSTOMS INSPECTOR KILLED BY APACHES.

Tucson—Tombstone, Arizona, special. Couriers from Bisbee arrived this morning, with intelligence of the killing by Apaches of William A. Daniels, mounted inspector of customs. Armed men from Bisbee, on receipt of this information, started after the Apaches, and a courier was sent to Tombstone for assistance. About thirty mounted volunteers well armed, started for the scene, with A. T. Jones and several experienced men at their head. Mayor Thomas, with twenty-five well armed men, also left here to engage in pursuit of the Apaches.

FIRE IN CHINATOWN.

Fire to-night in Chinatown destroyed two buildings and completely gutted a Chinese theater. One of the buildings destroyed was occupied by a Chinese restaurant, which had recently been fitted up at an expense of $15,000. The total loss is placed at $70,000. Insurance unknown.

LYING RUMOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—A street rumor has been in circulation that the Union iron works of this city had been attached for a million dollars. Investigation of it shows it to have been unfounded, no attachment for any amount of any kind having been levied. The canard has been traced to a rival manufactory.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.

Cleared—Norwegian ship Impersonator, Port Townsend. Sailed—Steamer Wilmington, Victoria.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

North Pacific, light local rains, followed by fair weather. Middle and south Pacific, fair.

MONTANA.

MARSHAL KELLY'S RECORD.

HELENA, June 10.—The Herald here speaks of Kelly, recently appointed United States marshal, as "an unreconstructed rebel," and says: "Nearly thirty years ago, being then a citizen of Missouri, he was actively engaged in a conspiracy to force slavery into Kansas. He edited a paper called the Border Ruffian, which candidly expressed its character, and which championed the effort to force the Lecompton constitution on the people of Kansas. When the war followed he was a Missouri bushwhacker, warring against loyal neighbors, and taking occasional shots at Yankee soldiers. When the Union party gained the ascendancy in Missouri he removed to Montana, but we have never learned that he repented of his disloyalty. The fact seems that he is rather proud of it."

A CORRECTION.

HELENA, June 10.—Dr. W. P. Lawver, United States mint examiner, authorizes the statement that the associated press telegram this morning, stating that several witnesses testified to the fact that R. B. Harrison, assayer in charge of the Helena, Montana, mint used public funds for private speculations is a malicious untruth, to injure Harrison. No such evidence was brought, nor any such fact established in the inspection of the assay office at Helena, just made. On the contrary the office was found in perfect condition, and the accounts adjusted to a cent.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

SHERMAN AT PORT TOWNSEND.

PORT TOWNSEND, June 10.—[Special.]—Senator Sherman and party arrived here on the steamer George E. Starr at 8 P. M. Salutes were fired and the town was gaily decorated. A committee of the city council and board of trade received them on the wharf. Carriages were in waiting, which took them around the hills, where they had a fine view of the harbor and surroundings. The party then returned to the Opera house, where Al. Weir delivered an address of welcome to the visitors, to which Senator Sherman, Charles Francis Adams, Jr., and Governor Squire made appropriate responses, touching principally the need of fortifications at the entrance of Puget sound, "the great harbor that stands unequaled," and prophesying that the time is not far distant when the actual wants of commerce will make use of the natural advantages of this port.

CLEVELAND'S BLUNDERS.

The Senate Urged to Correct Them without Fear or Favor

Brooklyn Union (Mugwump)

It is reported from Washington that when the senate comes to pass judgment on such of Mr Cleveland's appointments as must receive its confirmation it will show a rigid insistance on civil service reform It is the duty of a republican senate to make inoperative, in so far as it can, the evil results of democratic ignorance and impatience, and in at least two cases of democratic provincialism

The very announcement of such a purpose on the part of the senate, if it be serious is proof of the moral strength of public sentiment which favors civil service reform The senate will do well to show that it recognizes the strength of this public sentiment, and especially the republican part of it. The reform will never be wholly accomplished by the democrats, not even by their president, for whom they have such affection. If the republican senate patriotically aid the president by correcting his mistakes, the credit for such reform of the civil service as may be wrought during his administration will not be all given to Mr Cleveland, but largely, as it ought to be, to republican sentiment.

New York Times Mr Zachariah Montgomery, who has just been made assistant attorney-general for the Interior department, has gained his unfavorable opinions about the common school system, not through the perversity, but by the natural shallowness and imbecility of his mind.

THE DOCTORS.

Last Day of the Annual Session of the State Medical Society

An Interesting Address Delivered by the Retiring President Dr S E Josephi upon the Subject Preventive Medicine

The last day of the session of the Oregon State Medical Society for this year closed yesterday afternoon The morning exercises consisted of the inaugural and valedictory addresses of the presidents, incoming and retiring

Dr S E Josephi delivered his valedictory as retiring president of the society having chosen for his subject, "Preventive Medicine" The address is of such general interest as to warrant its publication in full He said

Fellow members of the Oregon State Medical Society As time, in its resistless course, moves onward from year to year, from decade to decade, until each turn of the centuries marks an epoch in the world's history there is brought to our view a vast pyramid of discoveries and inventions, composed of stones hewn in all ages and representing an amount of labor, application and study most stupendous in its aggregate. Our own century has contributed most generously to this immense and enduring structure. And while the eventful results of former works are not to be disparaged, and paved the way for the brilliant discoveries of our own age, it is certain that the people of the present century have witnessed and are yet to witness, the largest and most pleasant aggregation of discoveries and inventions that has ever been known in the same period of time

While all branches of the arts and sciences have felt the impulse and benefit of this elevated vitality, the broad field of medicine has been enriched by the discovery of facts and the improved application of principles, but has been thereby inestimably benefited and shorn of much that was obscure and unsatisfactory [illegible] to us by reason of the new lights by which we are guided are the means at our command for the prevention or modification of disease

A prominent gentleman of this city some time since expressed to me surprise that physicians did not take a more active part toward the prevention of zymotic diseases This is simply an index of the fact that the laity do not understand or appreciate how prominently this department of medicine has been brought forward and studied and practiced in the profession The creation of national and state boards of health and of municipal health officers is really a long stride in the direction indicated But while the people look to the doctors to put into practice the measures necessary for the prevention of disease, they overlook the important fact that professional effort can do nothing practical without the hearty co operation of the people For years the profession, as individuals in societies, associations and academies, has promulgated the doctrine that many diseases are preventable, or, at least, subject to such modifications as to destroy in great part their virulence and danger The researches of Koch, Pasteur, Sternberg, Klein, Tomassi, Crudelli, [illegible] and many others are, viewed in a practical light, but the initial steps toward preventive medicine, in the various fields represented by the respective investigators Standing upon neutral and unprejudiced ground, we may well avoid the views of the extremists in the matter of germs as disease producers and concede that many of the claims of those who urge bacteria and micrococci as pathogenic germs have been fully proven, the others cannot yet be said to be substantiated How these germs act, whether by a power in themselves or by irritation by presence or by special poisons produced by the germ itself, just as the abnormal growth upon various plants known as galls, are supposed to be produced by the irritant action of some poisonous liquid introduced by the sting of an insect, we are not yet fully prepared to say but this we do know, that experimentation with pure cultures and attenuated virus has successfully demonstrated that in the case of some diseases of a most virulent character, a modified type of the specific disease may be induced devoid of danger to life, as a rule just in the same manner as inoculation of variolous virus produces a modified smallpox These facts have been shown to be true in some degree at least, by results of inoculations of attenuated cultures for some of the most grave diseases From December 22, 1884, to March 2, 1885, Dr Domingo Freire inoculated 1100 persons with his protective yellow fever virus No accidents followed and in almost all cases there was slight rise of temperature and some constitutional symptoms.* I am aware that doubt has been [illegible] servations, but until these doubts take a more definite shape than mere insinuations we ought to accept the results when reported in a definite and specific manner

Recently, in the telegraphic columns of the secular press, has been reported a large number of successful inoculations for cholera in Spain and while we must acknowledge that these results, in the main, are not yet of sufficient standing or magnitude to be entirely satisfactory, still they prove the tendency of professional thought and study toward the discovery, not only of preventive measures directed against some of the great scourges of humanity, but also of adequate means for the substantial modification of disease How far or in what manner these protectives will act in the warding off of virulent types of diseases, which are not self protective in their character, we cannot now say, but it is hoped the advance of science will solve this difficult problem

But while modification of disease is to be desired, where prevention cannot be accomplished, still the attainment of the latter object is the "ultima Thule" of our aims and desires And not only so, but prevention is the only way in which we can hope to secure the effective cooperation of the people at large Aside from all theories of bacteria, micrococci, spirilli, etc, we have had ample evidence of the fact that collections of decaying organic matter breed disease, and that cleanliness removes, to a very large extent, the tendency to the occurence of like disorders. We need not go far for the proofs of the truth of this statement. The reports of the health boards upon contagious diseases clearly show a diminution or increase of sickness in direct ratio to the cleanliness or filth of their official territory We know that destructive typhoid fever epidemics have been traced to contaminated waters, and in support of this latter statement, in addition to the convincing evidence we have heretofore had presented, we may refer to the recent epidemic at Plymouth, Pa where the source of the disease was clearly traced to the excreta of a patient who had contracted the disease in Philadelphia His discharges were thrown out upon the snow and, when this melted, were carried into the brook which supplied the town with water, in one short month over 1000 persons, out of a population of 8000, were attacked, with about 100 deaths

The well-known diffusion of malaria from illy drained lands and stagnant pools has but to be mentioned to suggest a prolific source of sickness and ofttimes death, and the carrying of contagion in the clothing from the sick to the well, in some of the eruptive fevers, is too well substantiated to be successfully refuted With the general knowledge of the influence produced [illegible] would seem that the [illegible] to ward off disease by such attention to hygiene [illegible] measures would be best calculated to subserve the end in view But while the trite axiom that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" seems to be accepted without question as to its truth, still humanity at large, as a rule, seem unwilling to make any special exertion against dangers that are not visible, though, when confronted by them in tangible shape, they will make every sacrifice to drive away that which a comparatively trifling outlay of money and energy at the proper time would have prevented from appearing at all It is upon the people that the responsibility rests for inaction in these matters of public hygiene What is needed is proper organization for the carrying out of the principles of preventive medicine "What is everybody's business is nobody's business," and so filth heaps accumulate, sewerage systems remain inadequate, and the poisonous effluvia, breeding disease and death, is continually mixing with the air we breathe, while men stand around and wonder why some one does not take measures to correct the evil The state should have a properly organized board of health and municipal corporations should have similar organizations Among other duties, the members of these boards should see that individual householders kept their premises, including sewerage, etc in a cleanly condition, and that outlets for waste were adequate to supply the demands upon them It is true many individuals from their own sense of what is needed, look carefully to the cleanliness of their premises, but of what avail is such a course to a man or his family if his neighbor persistently neglects these same duties. I know that in some places (Portland among the number) nonprofessional officers are empowered to abate nuisances when complaints shall be made, but how few cases of defective drainage and sewage, and neglected garbage heaps, or the insidious pollution of drinking water are brought to light in this way. Means should be taken to regulate the placing of traps for drains and waste pipes in houses, to promote cleanliness around dwellings and in streets and alleys, for the removal of all garbage and to prevent its going into drains and sewers, to insure the carrying off of sewer gas above the breathing level, etc.

I do not wish to be considered an alarmist, but in connection with this subject and as an incentive to the importance of its notice, an allusion to the anticipated visitation of this continent by cholera in the near future, may be excused What has been said of its expected presence on the Atlantic seaboard will apply with perhaps a modified force to the Pacific slope

In an address before the Maryland Medical and Chirurgical faculty the president said "There is little ground for doubting that either this or the ensuing year the North American continent will be visited by this terrible disease and it has been fully demonstrated that, it is to [illegible] of the highest attainable efficiency, quarantine [illegible] We [illegible] fully shut it out from our [illegible] What is being [illegible] clearly out of our city [illegible] as will present the most favorable conditions for its development [illegible] is understood [illegible] alone It can only be [illegible] of all classes of citizens. This language [illegible] in the city of Baltimore is equally applicable to [illegible] And this is not only as regards the [illegible] as scarlet fever, diphtheria, typhoid fever and like affections which [illegible] sweeping from [illegible] dearest jewels in many a family crown

Our duty in this matter plainly lies in urging upon the laity the vital importance of applying the principles of prevention that have been inculcated, but further than this we cannot go With this our professional duty and responsibility in this regard, ends and that of the citizen begins If he heed not the warning voice of experience and scientific research, as applied to the [illegible] elements of life, surely we [illegible] consequences of his neglect.

Dr Josephi was followed by the newly elected president, Dr J W Givens, of Salem, who spoke briefly of the honor conferred upon him An adjournment was then taken until 2 o'clock in the afternoon when Dr [illegible] read a paper on the subject of "Colds," which was discussed at some length The remainder of the session was occupied in miscellaneous discussions and at 5 P M the society adjourned

TALKS TO GRADUATES.

Sermons by Rev G W Chandler and Rev H K Hines before the Senior Class of Willamette University

SALEM, 8th June

On Sunday, June 7th, at 10 A. M., the trustees, faculty and students, together with visiting ministers assembled in the lecture room of the M E church, and at 10 30 proceeded to the audience room, which was very tastefully decorated for the occasion After some excellent music by the choir and prayer by Rev E J Thompson of the Presbyterian church, Salem, Rev G W Chandler of the Taylor street M E church, [illegible] commencement sermons We give below [illegible] sketch of his [illegible] was the "Divine Method in the Perfect Life" [illegible] text was from [illegible]

MR CHANDLER'S SERMON

He began by saying that there were times in the history of life when the apprehension of some great truth was not only appropriate but [illegible] it seemed as if a divine power [illegible] the elevation to which we had come [illegible] the limitations on every side thrust this [illegible] upon us and compel us to look upon it whether we will or not. The thrilling influence [illegible] that it must be acted upon, but there are plenty of men who never rise over that [illegible] with the living fall just as they are [illegible] Happy are they who [illegible] its significance while it is yet [illegible] them Its supreme moment is not at its close but at its practical beginning, and in this fact there centers the vast significance for every graduating class of commencement season. [illegible] meaning of [illegible]

In the wide realm [illegible] is a great task [illegible] the magnificent endowments of young manhood and young womanhood is an evidence that God has given the field of labor and that in this field there is demand for skillful work

The young should be impressed with the fact that life is all before them. They are on the ascending grade and not on the decline They are not in the decline of any faculty. Their hearts are not chilled with the reflection that this or that thing has come into their lives too late [illegible] morning with them, and the joy [illegible] to feel long and beautiful, and the motives to quick and mighty work are as high as the heaven itself

The land is full of theories of reform That society should be lifted higher every one believes but how solve the problem One advocates temperance, another education One would relieve the world's grinding poverty and distress—the mode of procedure is peculiar to every man's conception of life These theories are not wrong, but they are not exactly according to God's order Beneath the intemperance and the lust and the crime is the deep [illegible] This many reformers overlook The world's method is outward—objective God's method is inward subjective Man looketh at the outward appearance God looketh at the heart If out of the heart, as out of a fountain, proceeds the evil, so out of the heart transformed by power and saved by grace must proceed the good, the beautiful and the true This is the divine method which has been largely forgotten

This method of keeping the heart is the only security in the midst of wickedness and temptation We need a shelter into which we can run when storms rise around We need the power [illegible] This [illegible] The jewel most [illegible] character, and to rear a character which shall be symmetrical and [illegible] is the mission upon which we are sent [illegible] nothing can take the place of character He pure in heart alone shall see God

It is only in following the divine order that there comes to men any satisfaction in their work We may seek the testimony of men of different classes and pursuits—men whose lives are given to the accumulation of wealth [illegible] gaining knowledge—and the answer is the same It is only keeping the heart with diligence, and in building a man or a woman after the pattern of Christ that men build [illegible]

It is only by [illegible] order that men [illegible] under highest inspiration [illegible] forth which they possess in this world [illegible] eternal [illegible] shadow of power and blessings upon their lives. Abandoned in [illegible] dement and darkness Materialism can never supply the soul Its universe [illegible] man in the presence of the universe and separates him from the infinite and the eternal and puts out the lights that shine in diviner skies It takes from men at one fell stroke all that can appease the yearnings or satisfy the aspirations it narrows the scope of human effort and limits advancement forever Men need a wider horizon, they need to lift themselves up to see God they need to feel that they are compassed about and watched in the struggle and that at the end there is both a home and a crown The unseen and the eternal are exhaustless sources of development. This was the inspiration of the apostle when he said, "I follow after" Faith in that which is unseen affects immortal duty and asserts a transcendent power over the hearts of men Here is the secret of might. Here is the secret of success. This is the true school where heroes are trained, this is the fountain head of moral courage The need of our age is a greater number of men who see no greatness where there is not greatness We need men who get their inspiration out of the gospel who utter their own thoughts, as these thoughts are born in hearts diligently kept The opinions of most men at best are only echoes. We need in this generation that each voice shall have its own sound and signification. We need men who feel that they are strong enough, because they stand in God's order, to sit in judgment on public opinion, and brave enough to stand erect while the multitude bows down to worship It is not only the school of heroism for living but of heroism in dying The long roll might be called of men who not only subdued kingdoms and quenched the violence of fire when living, but who, in their dying, became colossal in the grandeur of their faith

Mr Chandler then addressed the graduating class The class arose and remained standing during the address.

Members of the Graduating Class Young Ladies and Gentlemen At the close of the sermon I would address to you a brief personal word I congratulate you this morning on the elevation to which you have come, for to stand at the end of a college course is an elevation indeed You have been specially favored in this, that your training has proceeded from day to day and year to year under the care of faithful, earnest and Christian instructors The instruction and the counsel which you have received may not at all times been fully heeded by you but it is not lost for under the varied experiences of life it will come back to you with living power The fellowships and associations and experiences of a college life are a rich inheritance into which you have come. But you have reached the parting of the ways. The [illegible] entering upon [illegible] life which you can shape as the sculptor shapes his marble or the potter his clay Before you are two paths, and you must follow either to victory or defeat. I trust that the scepticism of the time will have no influence upon you, and that you will be carried away by no new or strange doctrine It will not hinder your intellectual progress that you enter upon busy life with an undoubting faith in Christ and his gospel Your college life has not been so narrow that you have been kept in ignorance of the new theories that in these last years have spread themselves abroad in the earth and float in the air A Christian is at liberty to give a patient hearing to anything which the atheist or the agnostic can urge against our faith The religion of Christ puts no shackles upon you, but it does not fear the results of your investigations I declare to you as you look back upon your college life and as you look hopefully toward the future, that if you make your life worth the living it will only be because it is controlled and cheered and hallowed by the presence of God. These are the traditions and this the teaching of this place, and under these influences have other classes gone out before you May the morning of your life, which is so full of promise, lengthen and brighten into the fullness of noon, and may the time be long before the end shall be The world is waiting for the ministry of your lives, and for each shoulder there is a burden May you be brave in the day of battle, strong in the hour of temptation and may you come at last into the everlasting kingdom, bringing your sheaves with you

Mr Hines's Sermon

On Sunday evening the Rev H K Hines, D D, preached the university sermon to a large and appreciative audience Like the one in the morning, this was a very able discourse, and we regret that we can only give a brief outline of it. The doctor chose as his text Luke vi 38, "Give and it shall be given unto you " For all the ages the human mind has forever been searching for the true law of progress.

The concepts of individual thought become the law and limitations of progress to the individual Every individual life has its individual philosophy, that which gives it character and personality that which makes us ourselves and not somebody else.

All the facts and phenomena of life are to be studied and interpreted in relation to its philosophy Outward conditions are inner ideals, partially or perfectly materialized They are fruits But what are fruits? They are the hardening of the juices and sap and life of the tree into the last results of its season of growth "By their fruits"—when they are grown and ripened, when the spring and summer and autumn, when the sunshine and shade the dew and raindrop, have ripened into the [illegible]—ye shall know them

Within us is the [illegible] and fountain of [illegible] life of the individual Christian is the [illegible] of to what extent [illegible] become concrete and actualized. It shows how nearly [illegible] crystalized [illegible] in the ideal [illegible] Christianity itself [illegible] the ideal Christian [illegible] When therefore, we seek for the absolute [illegible] of the divine life, our first inquiry [illegible] follow his steps?

Even God, with [illegible] his grandest [illegible] the lowest grade of giving is the material The true gift is the gift of self. Let me illustrate this proposition by what we know of the character of God in respect to the same philosophy, one might think that God would be eternally satisfied in himself He therefore has no want outside of himself And yet he is eternally giving, eternally seeking new ways and new forms in which to give himself [illegible] Look into its vast lengths and distances. Stand on the sound globe You see everywhere God giving himself in power to us The glad spring morning, the full summer day, the coming autumn harvest, the God in spring bud and summer flower and ripened harvest, giving himself to man He gives himself in the abiding presence and influence of his holy spirit [illegible] not only a person approaching He is in atmosphere surrounding—a life in flowing and quickening He gives himself too, in his manifested moral life, in his Son We want to know what God is morally and spiritually, as well as what he is intellectually and potentially What lies back of this power What I may find [illegible] to be when I walk the shadowed, rugged paths of life To know what is his heart I look into creation and I see power streaming from his fingers everywhere and 'I am afraid of him I look down the map of history and I find its blood tinctured all the way So, at the end of all my preaching I go and stand by the cradle of Bethlehem I go into the wilderness of Jordan to the Garden of Gethsemene and to the cross of Calvary, and I find out in that life and in that death what God is morally and spiritually God manifesting himself, giving himself in his Son to me

I illustrate this beautiful philosophy, in the second place, as the condition and measure of moral and intellectual life in the human soul Our God likeness is developed in a natural order [illegible] the lines of our natures of God

Religion is a theory and an experience and as such it is a science It is the most profound of the sciences. On its metaphysical side it opens a field for widest thought On its doctrinal side, for deepest research On its experimental side, for most ecstatic realizations upon "Joy unspeakable and full of glory " The bible is the text book of its science Unlike the text book of the schools, this has never yielded up its best truth to the inquisition of the students It never will Let me caution you against supposing the bible extinguished, and henceforth to be laid away with spelling books, and readers and grammars because it has already yielded up its treasures—served the purpose of a scaffolding to lift you to higher acquisitions No! You will reach no summit, only to see a higher It is the true light, the true fire, the true sanctity on the altar of the temple of science as well as on the altar in the temple of God

But religion is also a light to the cultured and perfected and as such it is an art—the very first of the arts We call that artistic which is the product of skill, working into outward forms mental ideals. All great, good life is in this sense artistic and so religion becomes an art as well as a science We call him an artist who, from the genius of art within, takes the rough canvas, the crude, unblended colors, and weaves them into lights and shades into flower and foliage and fruit into hill and valley and vine, and spreads the landscape upon that canvas until you can almost see the leaf quiver in the zephyr the dew glisten on the rosebud, or hear the birds singing among the lower [illegible] branches

Or we call him an artist who, from the same inspiration of art takes the rough boulder, tossed by an earthquake throe from the shoulders of the mountain, or dug from the mines of the quaking morass, and cuts, and chisels, and pounds it until it stands before you the almost vitalized counterfeit of a Washington, or a Lincoln, or a Garfield

Or, we call him an artist who takes the human voice, capable only at first of a cry or a wail, and trains and seasons and bends it until it sweeps the scale of all harmonies and all song, and a world sits entranced under the spell of a Jenny Lind

Much more is he an artist who takes the crude materials of his own untrained life and weaves and chisels and moulds them into forms of beauty and power for humanity to admire and imitate

See, over there in Europe, 400 years ago, is a man whose brain has been smitten by a thought flashed from the mind of God He stands on a western headland and looks with a deep, ideal longing down unpathed solitudes of sea.

Hidden out of sight he sees islands and continents, and a way round the world This ideal grows into his dreams He has only to look into his own soul to see it all He travels over Europe He beats at the bolted doors of the world's treasuries. Finally his plea touched a woman's heart, and with her blessing he sails out of the known into the unknown Down the seas the weary weeks sweep him onward and away Mutiny roars on his deck But he prays the privilege of plunging another night farther into the unknown Long ere the morning whitens the sea wave he paces the deck With the first gray of dawn he stands looking westward into the retreating night. "A light! A light!" is shouted from the topmost forecastle He stands monumented forever in the glory of an achieved idea.

Or, see again Out there in central New York is a young man peddling tinware along the country highways or on the village streets There is a deep outlook, a far away outlook in his eye He pauses of an evening at the gate of a camp ground On the stand a man of God, whose silver hair and heart-lit face bespoke his kinship to the skies was setting forth the Christian life as the consummate fruit and glory of all life Alone this young man bowed at the altar Alone he caught there, down the distant years, the ideal vision of his best life There he began by his high Christian art, to work the marble of his being towards it. It took many a year He wrought in the schools, in the academies, in the college He wrought among the mountains of Brazil as a missionary of the cross. He wrought at Concord, and at Evanston, and John Dempster lay down at last, his heart panting for a last field on our Pacific shores, by the silvery lake on whose shore he had touched the statue of his life into immortal completeness.

Or, but once more Down there in Indiana, out there on the Mississippi, is a chopper in the woods, a boatman on the river As he wipes the beaded sweat from his brow, or bends to the hard tug of his oar, it is merely a physical struggle with—shall I say adverse conditions? His soul is wrestling with ideals of a future through which are moving, tramping, and rocking earthquakes of revolution Toward his ideal place he wrought, wrought out of sight, wrought in defeat, but yet forever wrought So when God's providential hour had come Lincoln was lifted at once to the apex of the monument of freedom into which had been builded all free thought and great life since the beginning of the world He is the true Bartholdi—the true statue of "Liberty enlightening the world."

In such men we are apt to think the orb of life swings nearest to God—touches its perihelion and from henceforth all must be recession, decline to aphelion But no! humanity is on its travel eternityward. Starting from the finite the growth of the art of high, great life is towards the infinite The pattern is ever above all The measure of our likeness to it will be the proof of the fidelity of our Christian art. The measure of our giving will be the measure of our accomplishing The perfect pattern must be hung along all the walls and walks and corridors of life In our schools no less than in our churches it must hold the eye of the artist-worker forevermore The whole being must be kindled to the holiest enthusiasm of consecration to the making of humanity, our own humanity, all it may be The last great gift that crowns all and purchases all is the heart.

Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette There are a good many symptoms in the air that Cleveland will have to get accustomed to the reverberations of Republican artillery.

AN ADDRESS

To the Voters of the City of Portland—Gentlemen For about thirty years I have been a resident of this city During all that period I have persistently refused to be a candidate for any office in your gift until now It would therefore seem proper that I should give you the reasons why I have at last, consented to stand as a candidate and I ask you for your suffrages It will be remembered that last winter I was appointed as one of the board of trade committee, formed for the purpose of suggesting necessary amendments to the city charter In that committee I proposed an amendment by which the city council would be empowered to regulate the rates of water This amendment was unanimously adopted, both by the committee and the board of trade The council committee for the revision of the charter, sitting at the same time, also passed a like amendment, which was also unanimously passed by the council The board of trade's amendments were placed in the hands of the legislative committee to be presented to the legislature of Oregon for legislative enactment. That committee, without any authority from the board of trade, consented to have the water clause stricken out, and so thus the most necessary of any of the proposed amendments the one which had received the unanimous endorsement of both the committees of the board of trade, of the city council and of the entire people, failed to become a law, and left the people as before subjected to the most burdensome, oppressive and outrageous water tax that exists in any city in the whole world I propose to prove this let us look at a few facts and figures It is a reasonable assumption that in cities of like population, the rates of water should be established at nearly a like amount. The three cities of the United States which, by the census of 1880 were nearest in population [illegible] were Wilmington N C, Binghampton, N Y and Bloomington, Ill Their number and population by that census are as follows

Portland Or [illegible]
Wilmington [illegible]
Binghampton [illegible]
Bloomington [illegible]

The rates of water per annum in the several cities for one small family are as follows

Portland Or [illegible]
Wilmington N C [illegible]
Binghampton [illegible]
Bloomington Ill average [illegible]

From these figures it will be ascertained that the people of the city of Portland pay at least four times as much for water as the people of these other cities, and in all probability higher rates than is paid by the people of any other city on the face of the globe Now why should this be so? The water here is taken from the river as it is at Binghampton, and there is no valid reason why it can not be done as cheaply here as there There the water is furnished at $6 per annum which yields sufficient revenue to pay a handsome income on the money invested Why then are we taxed so outrageously here? And what becomes of the surplus revenue that is filched from our people To show what that surplus is, let us look at some figures again The revenue derived from the water service in Binghampton amounts annually, in round numbers to $40,000

This sum as before stated yields a sufficient income on the money invested Here in Portland the rates of water are four times what they are in Binghampton and consequently the revenue must be four times more, or $160 000 per annum This leaves the sum of $120 000 of which the people of this city are despoiled over and above what is a fair income to the water company If this is not wholesale robbery what is it? If the common council of the city of Portland were taxing the people of this city $120 000 per annum over and above the necessary expenditure of the city, would not steps be taken at once to remedy the outrage Is it any less an outrage for the people of this city to be plundered by the water company than it would be to be plundered by the council? That these figure are not overdrawn we will produce further testimony, and that from the water company itself Twelve years ago the water company proposed to sell to the city of Portland their plant for the sum of $400,000, which was undoubtedly twice what it was then worth The people voted on the proposition and rejected it

But before the election, in order to induce the people to vote for the proposition, the company issued a circular, in which they produced figures to show that the income then was about $[illegible]000 per annum which would enable the city to pay interest on the outlay and running expenses, reduce the rates 25 per cent. and still leave a net profit of over $6000 The following is an extract

"The city can run the works, reduce the rate 25 per cent and leave a balance in favor of the city of $6 [illegible]0 or in other words, consumers that now pay $2 per month can be supplied at $1 50 per month, and others in proportion and still the city will receive a revenue without taxing the people for a water supply"

Now when we consider their statement that at $2 per month there was a yearly surplus of $19,000 over and above the sum necessary to pay interest and running expenses, rating the works at $300,000 that this latter sum was about twice their outlay then that the population of the city has since trebled and that there is a greatly increased use for water owing to our sewage system, we are confirmed in the belief that we are taxed at least $120,000 per annum over and above what we ought justly to be taxed for our water supply

Does not such a flagrant abuse need a remedy? No one can deny that it should be remedied And the only remedy is the one proposed by the committee last winter The legislature should grant to the common council the right to regulate these rates That remedy is fair and legal The supreme court of the United States in the case of "Spring Valley Water Works vs. Schottler, et al, 110 U S 347" decided that the legislature of a state had that inherent right It said, "Long before the (Cal.) constitution of 1879 was adopted, statutes had been passed in many of the states, requiring water companies, gas companies and other companies of like character to supply their customers at prices to be fixed by the municipal authorities of the locality, and as an independent proposition we see no reason why such a regulation is not within the scope of legislative power unless prohibited by constitutional limitation or valid contract obligation Whether expedient or not is a question for the legislature, not the courts * * * That it is within the power of the government to regulate the prices at which water shall be sold by one who enjoys a virtual monopoly of the sale we do not doubt. That question is settled by what we decided on full consultation in 'Munn vs Illinois, 94 U S 113 '"

But the question involved in these outrageous water rates is not as to whether we shall be despoiled of our property, but it is also, as to whether we shall retain our political liberty The water company of this city is now controlled by a political boss He already dictates and controls the nominations of one party, and endeavored also to control the choice of the other He was instrumental in defeating the people in their demand before the last legislature But the water company still continue to tax the people of this city $120 000 per annum, over and above a fair revenue, and it will furnish a campaign fund that will make that company the political dictator of Oregon If this taxation continues the money of which we are despoiled can be used to defeat us in conventions and at the polls, unless we appear hat in hand at the water company's office and pledge ourselves to do its bidding Against this outrageous situation there should be one universal revolt. This is a question above party republicans as well as democrats are opposed to boss rule And nowhere in America is there any such rule so obnoxious as here, as nowhere in America is a boss allowed to levy upon a free people such an outrageous tax, to be used for their own political subjugation

Fellow-citizens of Portland, this is the issue before you, and upon this issue I ask your support If elected mayor by you, I will see that at the very first session of the legislature the right to remedy this flagrant abuse shall be conferred upon the city council. But for this issue I would not have accepted the nomination This nomination came to me unsought. There is no man in Portland that can say I have solicited the nomination, and I accepted it only so that I could give the people a chance to give expression to their opinion on this question at the polls But now that I am nominated, I do ask for your votes, not for myself merely, but for the cause I represent. If you will stay my hand, as I honestly believe you ought, until the going down of the sun on next Monday, we will win a victory that will relieve us of a most unjust and burdensome taxation, and kill the worst bossism that ever existed in any country

Politics in Virginia.

Philadelphia Press

As the returns come in from the spring elections in Virginia, it is found that the republican gains were general In one place, Norfolk, only was there a loss. Petersburg, Senator Mahone's home, showed a largely increased republican majority, while Alexandria, the home of Congressman Barbour, chairman of the democratic state committee, gave a largely reduced democratic majority A dispatch to the Boston Herald says that these results have greatly depressed the democrats, and their hopes of carrying the state this fall have been correspondingly lessened In looking about for the cause they pitch upon Cleveland's slowness in making changes in the federal offices in Virginia, but this is manifestly absurd in view of the events of the past ten days. The bourbons can with more reason ascribe their defeat to the disgust of the people with the discreditable record the party made during the past two years.

We adopt this method to inform the public, both of this city and its surroundings, of a very important change to take place shortly. Our business will undergo a complete change by the introduction of entirely new lines of goods. We shall open a Mammoth Bargain Store on the style of Macy's of New York. Our assortment will embrace about everything that can be conveniently sold on our premises. The new lines to be added to our present stock will be Ladies and Gents' Furnishing Goods, Ladies and Misses' Suits, Cloaks, etc., Household Dry Goods, Millinery Goods, etc., etc.; and to that end our eastern resident buyer is now busily engaged buying up all the bargains to be secured. These new lines, together with our lines, familiar to the public, such as Crockery, Glassware, Silverware, Cutlery, Kerosene Fixtures, Baby Carriages, Refrigerators, Toys, Dolls, Household Furniture, Fancy Goods, Leather Goods, etc., etc., will make our establishment a feature on this coast. The opening of this new business will take place early the coming month.

THE GRISWOLD CASE.

U. S. District Court—District of Oregon.

Wednesday, June 10, 1885.

The United States vs. William C. Griswold. (No. [illegible].) Motion for leave to enter satisfaction of judgment.

An action under §§ 3490-94 of the R. S. An action brought by a private prosecutor under §§ 3490-94 of the R. S., to recover damages and a forfeiture for a violation of § 5438 of the R. S., is what was known at common law as a "popular" or qui tam action, and is under the sole and exclusive control of said prosecutor, subject to the restriction on his right to discontinue the same contained in § 3491 of the R. S., and his interest or share in any judgment obtained therein is his absolute private property and the United States cannot compromise, remit or release the same by pardon or otherwise.

DEADY, J. By section 3469 of the revised statutes, it is provided as follows:

"Upon a report by a district attorney, or any special attorney or agent having charge of any claim in favor of the United States, showing in detail the condition of such claim, and the terms upon which the same may be compromised, and recommending that it be compromised on the terms so offered, and upon the recommendation of the solicitor of the treasury, the secretary of the treasury is authorized to compromise such claim accordingly."

The district attorney now applies for leave, under this section, to enter satisfaction of the judgment in this case in pursuance of an alleged compromise by the secretary of the treasury, of the sum or debt remaining due thereon, to-wit: $23,576 for the sum of $100.

It appears from the petition, that on May 27, 1875, the United States, by B. F. Dowell, commenced an action in this court against William C. Griswold, under §§ 3490-94 of the revised statutes, for certain forfeitures and damages, on account of the violation of § 5438 of said statute, in knowingly making, presenting and obtaining payment from the treasury of the United States, in January, 1871, of certain false claims commonly called "the Jesse Robinson claims;" that thereafter on July 20, 1879, a judgment was duly entered in said cause in favor of the United States and against the said Griswold, for the sum of $35,228, together with costs and disbursements, amounting to $2875 60; that divers sums have since been collected by execution and applied on said judgment, but there remains still due and owing thereon the sum of $23,556; that on November 22, 1884, the secretary of the treasury, on the report and recommendation of the district attorney and the solicitor of the treasury, compromised said claim for $100 and the release of Griswold's interest in certain property situate in Salem, Oregon, and known as "the agricultural works;" that said Griswold has paid said sum of money and executed said release to the United States, and that the solicitor of the treasury, in a correspondence between himself and the district attorney, copies of which are annexed to the petition, has directed the latter officer to take the necessary steps to carry said compromise into effect.

In his letter of November 22, 1884, the solicitor of the treasury says: "It may be proper to state that I entertained serious doubts as to my authority to compromise such a claim or judgment, and accordingly the secretary of the treasury submitted the matter to the solicitor general. That officer determined the question in favor of the jurisdiction of this office, but added: 'Even if this conclusion was somewhat uncertain, I might still give the above advice, seeing that if it be mistaken the prosecutor may have relief by proceedings in court, whereas if the advice was to the contrary and mistaken, Griswold could have no means of correcting it, that occurs to me.' In order that any rights that Mr. Dowell may suppose he possesses may be fully protected, and if possible adjudicated, you are hereby directed before taking the necessary steps to carry this compromise into effect, to formally notify him of your intention to do so, giving him ample time to appear in court, and make such objection thereto as he may determine his interests require. As I do not desire that Mr. Dowell shall be so situated by your action or by that of this office, that he can hereafter successfully set up any claim for damages or otherwise, either in court or before congress."

In pursuance of this direction the prosecutor, B. F. Dowell, was notified of this application and appeared and answered the petition, and was heard by himself and counsel in opposition thereto.

By his answer, the prosecutor objects to the entry of satisfaction, alleging that he was not consulted concerning the alleged compromise; that the action in which the judgment was given was a qui tam one, and that the one-half of said judgment belongs to him, and the United States has no power or authority to compromise his share thereof without his consent.

The prosecutor also alleges in his answer that the compromise ought not to be made for the further reason that Griswold has claims on the government of considerable value, specifying them in detail, and a lot in Salem, Oregon, that should be applied on the judgment, and concludes by saying that he has offered and now offers to take one-third of the balance due for the whole judgment."

The amount received on this judgment except a trifling sum, was not made on executions issued thereon, but on a sale by a master, of property theretofore fraudulently assigned by the judgment debtor to his wife, in pursuance of a decree of the circuit court, in a suit conducted by the prosecutor to subject the same to the payment thereof, after tedious and costly litigation. U. S. v. Griswold and wife, 7 Saw., [illegible].

The property spoken of as "the agricultural works," was mortgaged by the judgment debtor to his attorneys and others, after the action was commenced and before judgment therein, and the amount now due on said mortgages is probably more than the property is worth or will sell for. U. S. v. Griswold, 7 Saw., 296. But the interest of said debtor in said property is the legal interest, as owner and mortgagor, and is therefore bound by the lien of the judgment from the date thereof, and if it is of any value, can be sold on execution, subject to the mortgages, and the proceeds of sale applied on the judgment.

This being so, the release of Griswold's interest in this property is an idle thing—a mere make-believe—that neither inconveniences him nor benefits the United States. Therefore, the only consideration for this compromise by which Griswold is to be absolutely released and discharged from the payment of a judgment against him of $23,576, for and on account of money fraudulently obtained from the United States treasury, is this paltry sum of $100. And further, the only reason given for this extraordinary favor, not to an unfortunate, but to a fraudulent debtor, is, that he has no visible property and it will save the trifling trouble and expense of issuing an execution on this judgment once in five years, for the purpose of keeping it in force.

In view of these facts, the transaction might more properly be characterized as a remission or pardon than a compromise.

However, I suppose the right of the United States to release the defendant from this judgment, rather than the justice or policy of the act, as between it and Griswold, is the real question now before this court.

And first, what is the nature of the action authorized and regulated by §§3490-94 of the revised statutes and what is the relation of Dowell to the same and the nature of his interest in the judgment given against the defendant therein?

Section 3490 of the revised statutes provides, that if any person not in the army or navy of the United States, "shall do or commit any of the acts prohibited" by §5438 of said statutes, such as among other things, knowingly make or present for payment any false claim against the United States, he shall forfeit and pay to the same the sum of $2000, and double the damages that the United States may sustain by reason thereof, together with the costs of suit, which forfeiture and damages shall be sued for in one action.

Section 3491 gives the district court of the district, where the offender may be found, jurisdiction of the action, and adds: "Such suit may be brought and carried on by any person, as well for himself as the United States; the same shall be at the sole cost and charge of such person, and shall be in the name of the United States, but shall not be withdrawn or discontinued without the consent, in writing, of the judge of the court, and the district attorney."

Section 3492 makes it the duty of the district attorney to be diligent in looking after and prosecuting such cases; and section 3493 enacts that "the person bringing said suit and prosecuting it to final judgment, shall be entitled to receive one-half of the amount of such forfeiture, as well as one-half of the amount of the damages he shall recover and collect; and the other half thereof shall belong to and be paid over to the United States; and such person shall be entitled to receive to his own use all costs the court may award against the defendant, to be allowed and taxed according to any provision of law or rule of court in force, or that shall be in force in suits between private parties in said court."

At common law, an action thus authorized to be "brought and carried on" by any person, "as well for himself as the United States," was called a "popular" action, because given to the people in general; and when the penalty, as in this case, was given in part to the prosecutor and the remainder to the king or other public use it was called a qui tam action, because the plaintiff therein was described as one who sues for the king as well as for himself—Qui tam pro domino rege, quam pro se ipso in hoc parte sequitur. The action might be maintained in any case where a statute imposed a penalty for the commission or omission of a certain act, and gave the same, in whole or in part, to any one who would sue for it; and, it was brought in the name of the person prosecuting it, and was exclusively under his control. 3 Black., 160; 1 Bac. Ab., 73; U. S. v. Griswold, 5 Saw., 25; Bush v. U. S., 8 Saw., 327.

The fact that the statute in this case, requires the action to be brought in the name of the United States and provides that it shall not be discontinued without the consent of the judge and district attorney, does not change its character in this respect. These are mere restrictions on the mode of exercising the right to bring and maintain the action, and do not affect any substantial interest of the prosecutor in the proceeding or the fruit of it. Indeed, although this action was brought, at common law in the name of the prosecutor it was always set forth, that it was also brought for the benefit of the king or other public use, as well as himself, and while the position of the parties is reversed here, and the action is brought in the name of the United States, it is brought for the benefit of the prosecutor as well as the government.

The provision concerning the discontinuance of the action is intended to prevent abuse of it, and is evidently borrowed from 18 Eliz., ch. 5, which prohibits a plaintiff in such an action from compounding or compromising the same without the consent of the court. 1 Bac. Ab., 84.

By virtue of the statute prescribing the forfeiture and damages recovered in this case and authorizing any one to sue for them who would, the defendant Griswold became bound to pay the same to the prosecutor herein—the one-half for himself and the other half for the use of the United States. The law implied a contract to that effect, and the judgment obtained thereon is so far the private property of the prosecutor, and cannot be released or satisfied without his consent, no more than if it had been obtained in a private action on the bond of the defendant. 3 Black., 159. For although the king might, by a pardon of the offender, bar or prevent a popular action before it was commenced, he could not by this or any other means known to the law, interfere with its prosecution after it was commenced or release or dispose of the prosecutor's interest in the judgment therein: 5 Bac. Ab., 151; 3 Black., 399; Whar. C. P. P., § 528; 1 Bish. C. L., §§ 909, 911; U. S. v. Lancaster, 4 Wash. C. C., 64; Shoop v. Commonwealth, 3 Pa. st., 126; U. S. v. Harris, 1 Abb. U. S. Rep., 110; Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall., 381; 2 Hawkins P. C., ch 37, §§ 34, 54.

In ex parte Garland, Mr. Justice Field, in delivering the opinion of the court, when speaking of the effect and operation of a pardon says: "There is only this limitation to its operation, it does not restore offices forfeited or property or interests vested in others in consequence of the conviction and judgment."

And if the pardon of the offender would not release him from the obligation and effect of this judgment, so far as the prosecutor's interest therein is concerned, much less can the secretary of the treasury compromise it away, under § 3469 of the revised statutes. By its terms this section is confined to claims in favor of or debts due the United States. But the share or interest of the prosecutor in this judgment is a debt due him from the defendant therein—a claim in his favor and not that of the United States, and is beyond and outside of the purpose and purview of the statute.

The case of U. S. v. Morris (10 Whea., 246) cited by counsel for the judgment debtor, is not in point.

In that case and others like it, arising under acts relating to customs and navigation, the statute under which the customs officers claimed an interest in the forfeiture did not give them any absolute right therein until the same was reduced to money and paid to the collector, who was then required to pay a moiety of the same into the treasury and divide the remainder among the customs officers and informer, if there was one. The action was commenced and carried on by and in the name of the United States, and might have been discontinued at its pleasure. Besides, the act of March 3, 1797 (1 Stat., 506; § 5292 R. S.), then in force, gave the secretary of the treasury full power to remit any forfeiture occurring under such acts without willful negligence or intentional fraud. The court held that the power of remission could be exercised by the secretary after judgment of condemnation and before the payment of the proceeds to the collector.

The confiscation cases, 17 Wall., 151, also cited by counsel for the judgment debtor, only go to the point that an action commenced by the United States under the confiscation act of August 6, 1861, may be discontinued by it without the consent of the informer.

But the statute, under which Dowell brought this action, gave him one-half of the forfeiture and damages recovered therein absolutely and unconditionally; and for a very good reason. A forfeiture cannot occur under § 5438 of the Revised Statutes without the party incurring the conduct, while a violation of the customs and navigation laws, involving a forfeiture or penalty, may and often does occur without fraudulent intent or even willful negligence. In such case, it is provided that the secretary of the treasury may remit forfeitures or penalties incurred without moral turpitude at any time before the same are paid to the collector, and all persons who contribute to the prosecution with the expectation of sharing in the result, do so subject to the exercise of this power. But in this case there is no reason founded either in the justice or expediency of the case, why the government should reserve to itself the power to remit the forfeiture or damages given to the prosecutor, as an inducement and reward for bringing and maintaining the action at his own costs and charges.

The statute is a remedial one. It is intended to protect the treasury against the hungry and unscrupulous host that encompasses it on every side, and should be construed accordingly. It was passed upon the theory, based on experience as old as modern civilization, that one of the least expensive and most effective means of preventing frauds on the treasury is to make the perpetrators of them liable to actions by private persons acting under the strong stimulus of personal ill-will or the hope of gain. Prosecutions conducted by such means compare with the ordinary methods, as the enterprising privateer does to the slow-going public vessel!

But if the United States could, by pardoning the offender, or remitting the penalty, or compromising the claim, deprive the prosecutor of his reward, after he had earned it, the statute would be a nullity. For no one would be foolish enough to incur the trouble and expense, or even the ill-will, incident to the prosecution of an action for any such forfeiture and damages, subject to the right of the treasury, on ex parte statements and personal solicitation, to remit the same or compromise his judgment after it was obtained.

Take this case for example. There were three jury trials and one hearing on error, in the first of which the jury stood eight to three for the plaintiff and in the other two there were verdicts for the plaintiff for the sum of $35,228 each, on the defendant's written admission that he had obtained not less than $16,614 from the treasury on false and fictitious vouchers, and satisfactory proof that he did so knowingly. As this court said in U. S. vs. Griswold, 7 Saw., 309: "The preparation and trial of the case covered a wide field of inquiry and controversy, extending over a period of nearly a quarter of a century and reaching from the Atlantic to the Pacific." The defendant paid his counsel over $10,000 for their services, and when the prosecution obtained judgment on the verdict, his taxable costs and disbursements amounted to $2821 60. Then followed a suit in equity to cancel a fraudulent conveyance by the judgment debtor of property to his wife. This cost time and money, and the final decree, setting aside the conveyance and directing the property to be sold and the proceeds applied on the judgment was not entered until August 12, 1881, more than four years from the commencement of the action; and even then the department of justice, at the instance of the defendant, assumed to delay the sale of the property from time to time, so that the money on it was not realized until February, 1883.

And now, to release the defendant from this judgment and arbitrarily deprive the prosecutor of his share of this indebtedness, would, as was said by his counsel, on the argument, be "a shocking injustice." But I do not find that the law will allow it to be done.

My conclusion is, that the United States has no power over the prosecutor's share of this judgment, or right to release or compromise it in any way. It is his private property and exclusively under his control.

The application must be denied, and it is so ordered.

Mr. James F. Watson, district attorney.
Mr. H. Y. Thompson, for the defendant.
Mr. James K. Kelly, for the prosecutor.

Misplaced Fastidiousness.

Washington Republican (Rep.)

It is funnier than a circus or a comic opera to see a democratic administration with a Mississippi man in the cabinet turning up its nose at murder in that state. But for political murders there could have been no democratic administration.

Monday, the 29th day of June, 1885,

At the hour of 10 o'clock A. M. of said day, at the court house in said county and state, I will sell the above described real estate at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash, subject to redemption to satisfy said warrants, costs and accruing costs.

THOMAS A. JORDAN,
Sheriff of Multnomah county, Oregon.

Dated May 28, 1885.

Enclose 10 cents and the address of an eastern friend to this office for the statistical OREGONIAN. The best medium to circulate in the east.

The Oregonian.

PORTLAND, THURSDAY, JUNE 11 1885

WORTHY NOMINATIONS

Administration of city affairs has little to do with party. Heretofore there has been a strong disposition in Portland to select candidates for positions in the city government without much reference to their party affiliations This year this course has not been practicable, chiefly because our democratic brethren have been strongly "braced up" in their partisanship by their possession of the national administration Since they were determined to have a party ticket, republicans had no choice but to meet them with a party ticket The important thing, then, for republicans to consider was the nomination of candidates who would be accepted as worthy of public confidence and general support. This result has been reached. It would scarcely have been possible to name men more generally acceptable than Mr John Gates for mayor, and Messrs. McCraken Farrell and Hacheney for the common council If they are not all elected the failure will be due not to any possible dissatisfaction, but to mere indifference on the part of members of the republican majority of the city Anything like a full vote will elect them all

Than Mr Gates no citizen is better or more favorably known He has devoted himself to business among us during many years, and has been eminently successful. He is accurate and methodical, is noted for application to the business he has in hand and for the judgment with which he discharges it, his mind is the exact reverse of everything that is flashy, fussy, sensational or cranky; he mounts no hobbies, either of his own or anybody else's making, but is a [illegible] man. He is wholly above suspicion of any connection with "rings" or "jobs" of any description. A firm republican he has been always, but a demonstrative partisan he has never been His nomination has not brought out, so far as we have heard, a single expression of dissatisfaction, and those who vote against him will do so only because they are democrats and prefer a democratic to a republican mayor

The candidates named by the republicans for the common council are all excellent and reputable men. In one ward—the First—the republican candidate is so decidedly superior to the democratic in worthiness and character as to make it quite certain that he will draw largely upon the democratic vote of the ward. Expressions to this effect are very common among democratic residents of that part of the city The entire republican ticket will be elected if republicans only come out in force on election day. The republican majority is here, and when so good a ticket is presented there is no excuse for default at the polls on the part of those who would like to secure clean and efficient municipal government, and would prefer to secure it through the republican party

NEW YORK POLITICS

Although the election of governor, legislature and other officers in the empire state is five months in the future, the liveliest interest is felt in the nominations, and the politicians of both parties are actively preparing for the issue As the election of Cleveland turned upon the vote of this state and was notoriously decided in his favor by dissatisfied republicans, it becomes a matter of vital importance to the democrats that they should carry the elections next November A failure to do so will justly be regarded as a rebuff to the administration

What is most likely to weaken the democratic vote is the attitude of the administration toward certain influential leaders and active factions It will be seen, after eight months of Cleveland's term have expired, whether his policy has made more friends than enemies in the ranks of his own party That there is widespread dissatisfaction in the democratic ranks is plain enough from the bitter complaints which crop out in the party organs, and the president is constantly being reminded that he should not persist in a pol[illegible] licans back to their old fellowship.

Another element of danger will be found in the active interference of the administration in the interest of certain candidates. New York is the president's state, Secretary Manning's state, and the state of various and sundry other components of the administration, and complaints are already rife that they have entered upon the work of setting up the pins for their favorites The experience of President Arthur should serve as a warning to them to keep hands off, but the stake is too great. The person elected governor will be in office in 1888, and he will be a poor stick if he cannot sway the majority of the delegation to the next national convention The administration would not keep out of the fight if it could, and could not if it would

That the republicans will be more united by reason of their defeat after so close a contest is a reasonable conclusion They will try to nominate a candidate for governor who will be acceptable to the independents. The progress of the contest will be watched with much interest by the whole country

GOVERNMENTS AND COINAGE

Recently Secretary Bayard gave notice through representatives of the United States in foreign countries which are members of the Latin Union, of the willingness of our government to consider the question of the establishment of a common standard of coinage, when European countries are ready for a like movement.

The Latin Union, embracing in its membership France, Belgium, Italy, Switzerland and Greece, has since 1865 provided that the coins of those countries shall be uniform in weight and fineness, and annual conferences have been held to determine the amount of coin to be issued during each period of twelve months

England, the most reluctant of the great nations to enter into negotiations with other countries concerning silver, would be greatly benefited by the establishment of uniformity in the weight and fineness of coins, and while she probably would refuse to participate in a conference for the discussion of the relative merits of monometallism and bimetallism, she might gladly accept an invitation to a conference whose work would be confined to the declaration of the present value [illegible] easily worth as much upon the basis of [illegible] coins of the same denomination

It is not improbable that our government can, by prompt action, induce every nation of importance to send delegates to a conference to accomplish that work, and thus promote the stability of the monetary system of the whole world Ex-Governor Hicks, of the Bank of England, thinks that the United States, France and Germany could together fix a standard of coinage which will check the shrinkage of prices which has caused so much distress [illegible] but it will be much better to secure the cooperation of all great nations

In declining the nomination for [illegible] Mr W H Adams exhibited a spirit of [illegible] [illegible] There was objection [illegible] his continuance [illegible] disinterestedly stood aside The [illegible] did not argue any positive feeling [illegible] his part, but simply grew out of his [illegible] several years past with [illegible] as well as out of the apparent fact that the nomination had been sought by him and "worked up" in his behalf It is creditable to his good sense that he was able to see that his nomination at this time would have been an unpopular thing Mr Adams is in no sense an object of THE OREGONIAN'S dislike He is a man of fair ability, of good personal habits, and, for all it knows to the contrary, of honorable public and private character Much of the feeling manifested against him was no doubt unfounded and unjust but that is the penalty which a man always has to pay who is supposed to be seeking public place and using the means lying at hand to secure it. Many a man older than Mr Adams makes this mistake. To desire a place of public trust may be a wholly honorable ambition, it must be admitted, particularly when no salary belongs to it; and yet it is wise not to seem to desire it. "Seek and ye shall find" is the motto that opens the door to the kingdom of heaven, not to the doubtful and transitory honors of this world.

THE SETTLEMENT WITH CHIEF MOSES

In peacefully establishing Chief Moses and his people on permanent homes of their own, and in turning over their former reservation to settlement by white men General Miles has done a higher public service than if he had gained fifty savage battles His success is the more notable because he has secured peace and subordination where others in precisely similar efforts have only stirred up strife and rebellion Indeed we have only to look to the Umatilla reservation in eastern Oregon to find a contrast to the management, which, in the case of Moses, has secured every advantage desired

Viewed as an experiment merely, the settlement with Moses is specially interesting, for it points to the solution of the Indian problem, which for so many years has been a vexation and a reproach It is the second time that Gen Miles has secured through peaceful means all the advantages that could have been gained by a long war and a bloody triumph and it sufficiently proves the wisdom of the policy which he has long been trying to have the government apply to all the Indians under its control

This policy can be better traced and illustrated in its application to the Moses settlement than by an off-hand statement of it In 1877 Moses was a power among the Indians living along the upper Columbia river, and it was only by extravagant promises that he was prevailed upon to remain at peace and to hold his then large following from joining Chief Joseph in the war then in progress. The unreasonable promises made to keep Moses in restraint in 1877 resulted in 1879 in a treaty whereby he and his people surrendered all claims to the country south of the Columbia river, and were given a reservation known as the Columbia reservation, embracing 2,600,000 acres, or more than 5000 acres for each man, woman and child At the time of this grant several small bands not connected with Moses were living within the limits of the new reservation, and had lived there for many years engaged in mining, stock raising and farming in a small way, and as soon as Moses moved and began to exercise his authority, there was discontent, and it grew to open rebellion when Moses leased the exclusive grazing privileges of the reservation to two white men at a nominal figure The white men utterly ignored the smallest rights of the Indians, and there would undoubtedly have been war but for the interference of the military power both to protect the Indians and to hold them in check

The troubles continued till 1883 when General Miles, realizing the injustice of withholding so large an area of country from settlement and realizing also, that its control by Moses was only a cause of ill feeling likely to result in war, reported to a superior military authority, calling attention to the causes of fear and at the same time protesting against the granting of privileges to whites for any purpose on an Indian reservation. Again, confident that the existing troubles would end in bloodshed unless there should be a radical change in policy, he reported as follows

> I believe that an amicable and just settlement of the difficulty can be made that will be entirely satisfactory to both Indians and white men, provided the government will render a fair consideration to the Indians [illegible] to relinquish their claim to a valuable district of country granted to them by the highest officers of the government As Moses' Indians are [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the following
> That [illegible] granted Moses and [illegible] on the southern portion of what is known as the Colville reservation [illegible] 640 acres of agricultural land free from taxation for twenty-five [illegible] reservation and [illegible] country can be [illegible] and permanently [illegible] the settlement and development of the country involved

As an outcome of this recommendation and of increasing troubles between Moses and the whites, the former was summoned to Washington, where an agreement substantially after General Miles' plan was adopted Under its terms Moses and his people agreed to move upon the Colville reservation, to relinquish all claims to the Columbia reservation, and in return were to receive a compensation in the form of cattle, school house, saw and grist mills and farming implements in short, to be thoroughly established on land inalienable for a long term of years and to have the service of instructors in the arts of civilization at the charge of the government. All the Indians on the Columbia reservation who desired were permitted to remain, each head of a family being allowed 640 acres of land of his own selection All title to the reservation was relinquished This agreement was confirmed by congress and $85,000 was appropriated to carry it into effect.

The execution of the agreement was given over to General Miles, who has caused every provision to be carefully carried out, employing Capt F D Baldwin and other trustworthy and experienced officers in the work The advantages to themselves were carefully explained to the Indians, and they cheerfully acquiesced in all the plans Moses and his immediate following moved in a body to the Colville reservation but most of those originally living on the Columbia reservation have taken land in severalty. The promised supplies have been honestly furnished, and all are getting on prosperously and in the way of soon becoming self-sustaining The effort has been to deal frankly and kindly with the Indians in this matter, to steadily pursue their interests as well as those of the government, to make no false promises, in short, to deal with perfect justice

And what is the result? In two years a tribe of wild and troublesome Indians has been peaceably induced to give up savagery, to practically give up its tribal relations, and to take to civilized ways When Indians once see the benefits of civilization and civilized ways they are willing to accept them They are easily led by superior minds, and that the Indians of this country have not long ago been brought within the fold of civilization is due to a grossly faulty policy and mismanagement caused through avarice or ignorance Let the policy which has proved so successful with Moses be adopted and followed in all our dealings with Indians select men to carry out this policy who are fitted for the service give the Indians the benefit of intelligence and honest service with no other object in view but to direct them to better modes of life and in a short time and with half of the money expended for their support every Indian in the United States will become self supporting, or practically so All future negotiations with the Indians should be with a view to individualizing them and to settling them on small tracts of land But above all they should be under the guardianship of men who are not interested in maintaining the present system

We have little faith in the educational and other schemes which propose to elevate the Indian race to the level of our own The Indian is the barbarous product of a barbarous state of nature, and we do not believe that he can pass at a bound from barbarism to civilization The tendencies of his nature, the instincts inherited from a hundred savage grand fathers, we believe too strong to be turned aside in a single or in two or three generations We doubt the physical ability of the Indian to endure the civilizing process, at least the hot house methods which philanthropists and others are prescribing for him But his condition can be improved, and he can be kept from murdering white men He can be put under a discipline and in a situation which will give him the chance of civilization, if he can master it, and which will make him very much less of a public burden than he is now. And we believe that General Miles' plan is the best, with these ends in view, that has been proposed.

Mr. Pennoyer, in his address to the voters of the city, which we print to-day, endeavors to work up an issue on the question of water rates. While the water rates are undoubtedly high, the success or defeat of Mr. Pennoyer, or of Mr. Gates, could have no possible effect upon the question No mayor of Portland could do anything more in the premises than a private citizen Mr Pennoyer's address, therefore, put forth with a view to the election, is buncombe, merely He doesn't name that "political boss" who controls, as he alleges, the water company of the city, who "dictates the nominations of one party and endeavored to control those of the other" This is merely a freak of that eccentric imagination of Mr Pennoyer, which renders him a somewhat remarkable man to those who know him well

Among the names presented to the president for the collectorship at Port Townsend was that of a soldier who saw three years service in the Union army, and came out of the war with a commission won by meritorious conduct. The application for the office was supported by men of influence and character But the president disregarded it, for the purpose of paying his personal debt to Henry Ward Beecher, Democratic soldiers who served in the Union armies are not numerous, and the few who do associate with that party are not always appreciated Perhaps a confederate soldier might have got the appointment even over Beecher's boy

The candid members of the present administration at Washington admit that the republican officials have transacted the government business splendidly, which is the truth. From Cleveland down, including heads of departments, every democratic official has frankly admitted that the business of his office had been well done by his predecessor It is only the victimized mugwump who slanders faithful officials in order to cover his own humiliation

Don Quixote did not see that he was [illegible] absurd in his tilt against the windmills Mr Pennoyer does not see that he is as wide off the mark in his onslaught, for the purposes of the election, upon the water company The only gentleman as a hobby rider is an unconscious imitator of the other

The Philadelphia Press says that "no democratic or mugwump paper can be expected to remember that Secretary Chandler urged the abolition of the navy yards, whose large administrative charges are the chief reason of the enormous cost of 'repairs' in the navy"

"Aha!" chuckled the president when told that the McMinnville postmaster had been a Union soldier "This is proof that he is an offensive partisan, he fought the democratic party" He will have to go

EXCESSIVE HARMONY.

The Democrats Want the Country Postoffices

Special to Minneapolis Tribune

WASHINGTON, June 4—With two or three exceptions, every democratic senator is now in the city, and it is understood that toward the close of the week a conference or caucus is to be held to perfect a plan of action The movements of the president, in spite of all the statements to the contrary, have not been satisfactory to one democrat in ten Of course, it will not do for the leaders who are disgruntled to give expression to their opinion in public, but when two or three of them get together for any social purpose the curses which they utter against this "reform republican president," as they call Mr Cleveland, are as deep as they are loud It is understood to be the purpose of the leading democrats to call in a body upon the president and to insist either upon some change in the method of his procedure or upon war upon the administration Of course, the president cannot afford to antagonize his party so early in his term, and it is natural to expect, therefore, that the demands will have weight, and that by the 1st of July changes of importance will take place

A New York democratic congressman said to-day "The newspapers of the country are laughing at the idea that these small country postoffices are of any account I tell you the appointment of a democratic fourth class postmaster in my district makes a great deal more difference than would the selection of a secretary of state, a minister to England, or half a dozen important consuls from the town in which I live That is, I am speaking now from a political influence with the rank and file—the voters of the party whereas, on the other hand, at a cross roads postoffice the postmaster is looked upon as the oracle of politics Around his box stove in the winter gather the politicians of the neighborhood, and he has more influence among them than I have It is the same all over the state, and if we are to save the election this fall we must have the fourth class postoffices"

"What success have you had in inducing the president to listen to your demands" he was asked

"I was coolly informed that this was a great country that there was a great many states and a great many counties in it, and then his royal highness, the president of the United States, turned on his heel and left me"

"What did you do?"

"I turned on my heel and left him, and I do not propose to go back again in a hurry"

This is another indication of the excessive harmony which prevails in the democratic party

The Land Office Reform.

New York Tribune

General W Andrew Jackson Sparks, commissioner of the general land office, is not a popular man in the western country Assuming that every settler is a perjurer, he issued an order suspending all entries on land depending upon actual settlement or improvement until each case has been examined by a special agent This practically nullifies the homestead law Sparks doesn't mind a little thing like that but the western settlers mind it a great deal For in addition to keeping them out on an insulting pretext, Sparks lets in all speculators armed with cash or scrip. To tell how they feel about it in Montana a correspondent in Bozeman writes to the Tribune a letter printed elsewhere in this paper It will be noticed that this democratic reformer does not interfere with any body's rights in the south

ARRIVAL OF SHAD.

Nearly Half a Million of the Young Fish Placed in the Willamette

A Hundred Thousand Planted in the Snake—Something of the Shad's Habits in Atlantic Waters—What may be Expected

The car load of shad which left Washington last week for Portland arrived here in charge of Mr. Geo. H. H. Moore, the affable gentleman who has visited us twice before with carp. It was the longest journey ever attempted with young shad. The car was delayed from Friday evening until Sunday afternoon by the washout at the Gallatin bridge, and about 40 per cent of the fish died. Except for this unavoidable delay, the loss would have been small. Mr. Moore started with nearly a million shad, so there were plenty left after his arrival here. About 100,000 of the fish were placed in the Snake river at Ainsworth, and the remainder, numbering between 500,000 and [illegible], were brought direct to Portland and put into the Willamette at Shaver's incline, opposite Ainsworth dock. None of the shad are more than one-half to three-fourths of an inch long, and judging by the experience in Atlantic waters they ought to attain full growth, say four to five pounds—in three years.

Very much that has been written of the habits of the shad is only theoretical. Indeed positive knowledge is scarce, and the only way of arriving at conclusions is to note the initiatory step, wait for results, and let the imagination and special knowledge of the finny tribe, supply the remainder. About the first question that will suggest itself to the average fisherman is "Will the salmon and other fish devour the little shad?" That can be answered by the statement that the Shenandoah has been stocked with shad which thrive wonderfully, yet that river is full of black bass, a far more voracious fish than the salmon. In some way or other nature provides a way for the little fellows to take care of themselves. They will probably remain in the Willamette until late in the fall, and feed upon an insect called [illegible]. It is a minute white insect found anywhere on grass which grows in water. Towards winter they go to salt water, and by that time will have grown to be six or seven inches long.

In due time, it is believed they will show themselves in all the streams tributary to the Columbia which are below unsurmountable falls. However, this is only a theory, but it is pretty well established that in returning from the sea the shad will ascend such streams as have a temperature which suits them. For the last eight or nine years young shad have been placed in the Susquehanna and Potomac rivers. It was predicted and generally expected that the run this spring would be very large, but the predictions were not verified. The theory is that the shad, when they left Chesapeake bay to enter fresh water, found the temperature of the Susquehanna and the Potomac so much colder than the bay that they turned back and started up the other side. They kept on until they reached the Delaware and the Hudson, where the temperature suited them. This theory is forced by the fact that the catch in the Delaware and the Hudson this year is larger than has been known in twenty years. Of course, nothing can be proved, but this is the natural supposition.

The time required for a shad to attain a size which epicures enjoy is also a matter of theory. In the east sportsmen and scientists agree that in three years they will grow to weigh five pounds. This is shown by the fact that shad weighing five pounds are taken from streams in which they were planted three years before and in which shad were not natives and had not been caught before.

For the present stock of shad which it is hoped will thrive, our people are indebted to Senator Dolph, who exerted himself to secure them, to President Macleay of the board of trade, to the Northern Pacific railroad for free transportation, and of course to the Hon. Spencer F. Baird.

The car will leave Friday or Saturday for Tacoma to take a return cargo of the little neck or every day clams (Tapes [illegible]) to be transplanted east, also, some of the [illegible] size clams (Saxidomus [illegible]).

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

LEE—COOKE.—The marriage of Rev. Geo. H. Lee, the young and recently ordained pastor of the Plymouth Congregational church in this city to Miss Nettie A. Cooke of Salem took place yesterday at the Congregational church in that city. The parents of the groom were in attendance, his father, Rev. W. B. Lee of Olympia, performing the ceremony. The groomsmen were brothers of the contracting parties, Mr. Wm. A. Lee of this city and Mr. Clyde Cooke. The bridesmaids were the Misses May Quigley and Lillie Rogers. Quite a number from this city attended the wedding. The ceremony was performed at 11 o'clock, after which a reception was held at the residence of the bride's mother. The wedding party took the afternoon train for this city and to-day go to the Sound. The groom will officiate in his father's pulpit at Olympia next Sunday.

NOTED ELECTRICIAN.—Mr. Garrett Smith, chief electrician of the Western Union Telegraph Company, arrived from San Francisco by the State of California yesterday. Mr. Smith is well known in telegraphic circles as a deep thinker and able electrician, his exhaustive researches and inventions in connection with the system of multiplex telegraphy having worked a revolution in that wonderful science. His improvements in the methods of multiple transmission have rendered entirely practical and subordinate to the needs of the commercial world, that system which has hitherto shown great possibilities but has been almost barren of results. Mr. Smith is on a tour over the Western Union lines, with a view of establishing the new quadruplex system wherever it may appear to be necessary.

FISH FROM THE EAST.—C. A. Malarkey received from Duluth yesterday about two hundred pounds of Lake Superior trout, whitefish and pickerel—the first shipment to Portland of fresh lake fish. Of course they were packed in ice, but all arrived in excellent order. The whitefish are fat, sweet, almost boneless and very toothsome. This statement is not made from seeing them in the stalls, but from eating one. While the lake fish will not compare in flavor or richness with Oregon salmon or trout, they afford an agreeable change from regular fish diet and are a pleasant reminder of boyhood's days "back in the states." The shipment was eagerly taken by Malarkey's regular patrons.

GRAND LODGE OFFICERS.—Yesterday the Masonic grand lodge finished balloting for officers, with the following result: B. Van Dusen of Astoria, grand junior warden; D. C. McKercher of Portland, grand treasurer; J. J. Babcock of Salem, grand secretary. The reports of the secretary and treasurer were presented and accepted, also the report of committee on foreign correspondence. A request was presented from Multnomah lodge No. 1 of Oregon City, inviting the officers of the grand lodge to lay the corner stone of their new Odd Fellows' temple on Tuesday next. The invitation was accepted. The grand lodge adjourned until 2 o'clock, when miscellaneous business was transacted.

MUST PAY THE LEASE.—In the case of S. Herman against J. Kratz the plaintiff yesterday secured a judgment for $200, the amount sued for. The case was tried before Judge Smith and a jury. It seems that Herman owns a piece of property on Madison street, which was occupied several months by Kratz as a saloon. Kratz had leased the saloon for a certain length of time, and when he left it he became responsible for the rent during the unexpired period. He paid the rent for a few months and then let it run. Herman brought suit to recover the balance due him and the jury quickly gave him the amount sued for.

F. W. BALTES & CO.—D. C. Ireland, Esq., having retired from the printing and publishing firm of D. C. Ireland & Co., the business will hereafter be conducted by the remaining partners F. W. Baltes and J. C. Hayne, under the firm name of F. W. Baltes & Co. These gentlemen have been actively engaged in the business since its beginning, Mr. Baltes as manager and Mr. Hayne as foreman. Both are practical printers and have a thorough knowledge of the business in all its branches. Their facilities for the execution of fine printing of all kinds are unsurpassed.

AFTER THE FUNDS.—Early this morning the finance committee, appointed by the general committee having charge of the Fourth of July celebration, will begin the work of canvassing the business district for funds. Every one knows that a celebration, provided that it is a big thing, draws a great crowd to the city, and likewise considerable money. All who feel able may consider this notice an invitation to subscribe, so when two business-like men darken your doorways to-day, one of them carrying a paper, don't keep them waiting, but put down your name promptly.

FIRE AT FOREST GROVE.—At about 4 o'clock yesterday morning the blacksmith shop of James Buxton at Forest Grove, took fire and burned to the ground. Nothing saved. A large building adjoining, used for storing agricultural implements, caught fire and was consumed. This building contained quite an amount of machinery, which was saved. Mr. Buxton estimates his loss at $2000. No insurance. A self binder, three-seated hack, and other vehicles belonging to parties who had left them there for repairs were also consumed. The fire, Mr. Buxton thinks, originated at the forge.

ASSIGNMENT.—W. J. Lewis & Co. yesterday made an assignment to John Robertson for the benefit of all their creditors. The company's assets are their planing mill, wood work, machinery, etc., which is valued at $10,000; outstanding accounts $[illegible], and contracts on hand $1000. Their liabilities foot up to $7,444 75, the principal creditors being Williams & Elliott, $[illegible]; John Kerns, $[illegible]; laborers, $[illegible], and John Reynolds of Napavine, W. T., $40. Kerns is secured by a chattel mortgage on the planing mill property.

ARRIVAL OF DELAYED MAIL.—Yesterday was a busy day at the postoffice. The delayed eastern mail of two days came piling in upon the employes in the morning, decidedly flooding their working room, and although their nimble fingers flew rapidly they had scarcely made an impression on the mountain of letters and papers when the regular day's mail, having caught up, came in on time. People who hurried to get their eastern mail until late in the day made [illegible] half as much [illegible] inside.

THE IOWA EDITORS.—As has been previously announced the Iowa editorial excursion will arrive here next Sunday afternoon. Following is the itinerary for the week: Monday 11 P. M., leave for Tacoma and Seattle, returning here Wednesday. This morning leave for Ash[illegible] [illegible] transfer at Albany to Corvallis [illegible] Saturday, arriving here the same evening. [illegible] special boat to Astoria and return. [illegible] leave for Dayton, W. T. [illegible] remain there during [illegible].

FIRST IN THE WORLD.—Yesterday the Oregon and California railroad received direct from the shops, the Pullman Palace car "Ashland," an exact counterpart of the "Albany." It will leave for the south to-morrow and will go out regularly on Tuesdays and Fridays, returning on Mondays and Thursdays. A third sleeper, the "Roseburg," is expected soon and then there will be a daily service between this city and Ashland. The O. & C. can now boast of the finest sleeping cars in the world.

ANNUAL CONVOCATION.—The thirty-second annual convocation of the Protestant Episcopal church in Oregon will convene in Trinity church, Portland, this (Thursday) evening at 7:30 o'clock, when the bishop will deliver his annual address. Through the courtesy of the Oregon and California Railroad company all delegates coming to the convocation over their roads will be returned to their respective homes at one fifth of the regular fare.

AN AXOLOTL WANTED.—If any of our local fishermen should happen while whipping for trout to catch an axolotl, a newt, or fog fish, the reptile so much discussed lately—he will confer a favor by leaving it at THE OREGONIAN office. Professor Baird of the National Museum has asked Mr. Geo. H. M. Moore to secure a specimen for him, hence this request.

CONTINUED TRIAL.—The case of D. A. Conger for killing young Frank Pierce at Sappho, Columbia county, over a year ago comes on for trial at Hillsboro to-day by change of venue. The case was tried last June at St. Helens and the jury disagreed. The trial was reported then and will be to-day by John W. Cochran, stenographer.

LAWN PARTY.—At the lawn party of the First Congregational church to be given at Mr. Samuel D. Smith's, corner of Yamhill and Twelfth streets, Friday evening, the musical and literary programme will begin at 8 o'clock. It is hoped guests will arrive before that hour. Admission free. All friends of the church are cordially invited.

IMPROVED TICKET RACK.—Prentice, who adopted the mode of selling theater tickets without pegging the box plan, has arranged a rack for holding the seat checks, by which there is no possible chance of getting the seats mixed unless "Peck's Bad Boy" gets his work in on the racket.

THE O. R. & N.

Sharp Contest Promised at the Annual Election on the 15th

Two Nearly Equally Divided Factions Striving for Control—The President, Elijah Smith Hurrying to Portland

Next Monday, June 15, the annual elections of the following ex-Villard companies will take place in this city: The Oregon Railway and Navigation, the Oregon and Transcontinental, the Oregon Improvement, the Northern Pacific Terminal and the Willamette Locks and Transportation. Usually these annual elections are cut and dried affairs. The eastern stockholders pick out a board of directors, send their proxies to one of the officers here, have them voted and that ends the matter, the election being only a formal proceeding to conform with the Oregon statutes. But this year, so far as the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company is concerned, the rule will not be followed. "There's something in the wind," and just what that something is no one here seems to know, or if he does, he will not tell. However, by "putting this and that together," it may be inferred that two factions are contending for control of the company's affairs, which contest will be ended next Monday.

An OREGONIAN man applied to the various officers of the company in this city yesterday for information on the subject. All of them were ignorant of the proposed move, at least they feigned ignorance, and had nothing to say.

THE TWO FACTIONS.

About two weeks ago, one associated press dispatch from New York stated that Col. Brayton Ives would probably be chosen president of the O. R. & N., while another of the same date said that Elijah Smith had enough proxies in his pocket to insure his re-election. A telegram from St. Paul, published yesterday, stated that Endicott and other stockholders of the O. R. & N. had passed through en route to Portland to attend the annual meeting. Yesterday Mr. H. Campbell, agent of the Short Line, received a dispatch that Elijah Smith, president of the O. R. & N., was hurrying westward from Omaha as fast as steam could carry him. Hence, it is not wild to assume that there are two factions—one represented by the candidacy of Mr. Smith, the other by the candidacy of Mr. Ives. Probably the Boston stockholders are behind Mr. Smith, and the Field syndicate behind Mr. Ives.

It will be remembered that in December, 1883, when the Transcontinental was pushed for money, Villard went to some friends and borrowed $9,000,000, pledging, among other securities, the O. R. & N. stock then held by the Transcontinental company. This holding was a majority of the O. R. & N. stock, and the creditors were given the right to vote the stock. They had the option, at the end of the year, of buying the stock outright, but whether they buy it or not they control it, because the loan was not paid, so that practically the syndicate owns the O. R. & N. Among the men who advanced the $9,000,000 was Cyrus W. Field, and it was called the Field syndicate above, for want of a better name. Colonel Ives is one of the trustees of the pledged stock. Whether the syndicate is a unit on the choice of Colonel Ives, or the other stockholders a unit on the choice of Mr. Smith is not known out here. The O. R. & N. holdings in this city, outside of W. S. Ladd, are small. Mr. Ladd is reported as still owning 8000 shares, and Messrs. C. H. Lewis, H. W. Corbett and Henry Failing have small holdings. It is barely possible that enough stock is owned here to hold the balance of power. The entire stock is 240,000 shares.

WHY THE STRUGGLE?

So far as known the syndicate has not been dissatisfied with Mr. Smith's management, and no reason for wanting him ousted has come to light. But here is a question that comes up which is of interest to Oregon and Washington. If, as reported, the O. R. & N. has agreed upon terms under which its property shall be leased to the Northern and Union Pacific railroads, and nothing remains but to overcome some slight legal difficulties, why this contest for management? If some other corporation or corporations are to conduct the business over the O. R. & N. lines what matters it who is the nominal head of the lessor company. This leads to a suspicion that there will be no lease after all. Stock quotations tend to strengthen this view. Before negotiations for a joint lease began, O. R. & N. was selling from 61 to 63. Until news that negotiations were progressing stock rose, until when it was given out that the lease was certain to be made it reached [illegible]. Within two weeks it dropped to [illegible] and Tuesday opened at that figure. It closed at [illegible], and the drop of two points may be attributed to the report that the lease is off. However this may be, it is pretty certain that the syndicate has decided to take the management of the property, and that the other stockholders will try to prevent it.

PRESIDENT SMITH'S FAST RIDE.

On Monday evening, Elijah Smith, president of the O. R. & N. Co., left New York for Portland. He reached Chicago Tuesday evening and left by special train over the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy road, reaching Omaha at 1:30 yesterday morning. He left Omaha by special train over the Union Pacific at 10:25. The train consists of an engine and one car, and will run at the rate of 38 miles an hour. It will reach Huntington at 11:35 Thursday night, making the distance of 1416 miles in the Union Pacific lines in thirty-seven and a half hours. From Huntington to Portland Mr. Smith will be hauled just as fast as he wants to come, but barring accident, he will reach Portland within four days from starting time and will have beaten the record of Honest John Whiteaker from San Francisco to Washington when he saved the democrats the organization of the lower house of congress. Just why Mr. Smith waited so long to start has not been explained, but it looks as if he was in a [illegible] of a hurry to get here.

BRIEF MENTION.

Find [illegible] local news on the eighth page to-day.

The State of California arrived here at 1 P. M. yesterday.

Reserved seats for this week's performances at the Casino are on sale at Jones Bros.

Will Mrs. S. F. Merriam send her address to W. I. Wright, care J. C. Moreland, this city.

To-day the Northern Pacific will put on a dining car between Portland and Tacoma. Supper will be served going north and breakfast coming south.

Policeman Morgan extinguished a small blaze in the [illegible] house of [illegible] at an early hour yesterday morning by the aid of a patent hand fire extinguisher.

THE EAST SIDE.

The drill of Engine company [illegible] which was announced for last evening was postponed to Friday evening on account of the election.

Relief Hook and Ladder company of the First ward propose to entertain their friends in grand style at their house-warming this evening.

F. W. Berry, F. H. West and S. E. Josephi were elected delegates from St. David's church to the Episcopal convocation which meets in Portland to-day.

The City Guards of East Portland, Company F, Second brigade, O. S. M., who were burned out by the recent fire in that city, will reorganize this evening at Hall & Stott's hall, when an opportunity will be given for recruits to enlist. It is hoped there will be a large attendance.

SAN GREAL SOCIETY.—The young people of the First Presbyterian church have issued invitations to their friends for an excursion up the Columbia river on the steamer Lurline, Saturday of this week. Excursionists will have an opportunity to visit Latourelle and Multnomah, two of the finest waterfalls in the world. The boat will leave foot of Alder street at 8:30 A. M.

The latest thing in the piano line is the Decker Bros. [illegible], a beautiful instrument in style and tone. To be seen at the store of Kohler & Chase. Lovers of music and musicians should not fail to see it.

PIONEERS' REUNION

Programme of the Exercises to Take Place Next Monday

The annual reunion of the Oregon Pioneers' Association will take place at Ely's City park, in the pioneer town of Oregon City, Monday, June 15. Following is the programme for the day:

Procession will form under direction of the grand marshal, Col. W. L. White, near the railroad station, at 10 o'clock A. M., in the following order:

Oregon City Brass Band.
President and [illegible].
Standard bearers.
Orators of the day.
Members of the Pioneer Association who arrived in Oregon prior to or in 1840, followed by thirteen divisions to 1853, each with appropriate banner.
Friends of the association, men and women.

Procession will move as directed by the grand marshal, and on arriving at the park, exercises in the pavilion will be as follows:

Music by the band.
Prayer by the chaplain, Rev. G. H. Atkinson, D. D.
Opening address by the president, Hon. J. T. Apperson.
Occasional address by E. L. Eastham, Esq.
Music by the band.
Annual address by Hon. Geo. H. Williams.
Music by the band.
Benediction.

At the close of these exercises an hour will be spent in partaking of a basket lunch, on the park grounds, where all citizens of Oregon City and of Clackamas county are invited and urged to provide surplus for pioneer friends and strangers present.

At 3:30 o'clock P. M., at the pavilion, annual election of officers.

Camp fire in the evening. Grand Pioneer ball at the pavilion dancing floor.

LOST AND SAVED.

A dramatic cantata of interesting design, was given last evening at Masonic hall, under the auspices of W. C. T. U., with marked success. The argument is a newly started home by bride and groom of luxury and happiness, upon the principle of moderate use of wine, brought to a premature ruin by its effects. Happiness, joy and love were beautifully pictured, followed by suffering, ruin and despair, which only a loving wife and child could suffer. Joy and love, however, came out victorious with temperance. A bevy of Portland's finest amateur dramatists and singers rendered the cantata excellently. The audience was large and the applause was generous throughout the evening. The cast was as follows:

PACIFIC UNIVERSITY.

Review of the Commencement Exercises—Close of a Prosperous Year

FOREST GROVE, June 3—Commencement day of Pacific University opened fair and beautiful. A cloudless sky and a cool north breeze made it as nearly perfect as could be desired. The alumni and other visitors who had arrived the evening before were to be seen everywhere on the streets or about the college grounds, revisiting old scenes and enjoying the natural beauty of the place. Forest Grove has received lavishly of the gifts of nature—a fine location and most attractive scenery. And the grand old oaks saved from the pioneer forest and the rows of shady maples which have been set out along the streets have added largely to the original beauty of a townsite unsurpassed in this state. No one who has ever seen the town in June when its trees are in their fullest foliage has failed to remember it as one of the fairy spots in all this northwest region. And Forest Grove always looks her best when the annual commencement season comes around.

The exercises of the day are to be held in the church, that stands in a little green occupying a commanding position just in the business part of town. We peep into the church and see there a group of students busy in giving the finishing touches to the decorations of flowers and evergreens that are hanging in graceful festoons about the platform and upon the walls. It looks very neat and tasteful. A huge floral basket hangs over the front of the platform from the apex of the canopy formed by the festoons of cedar and fir, and a large banner hangs upon the wall behind. Upon it in gilt letters is the class motto Palmam [illegible] with the initials of the members of the class that is to be graduated to-day.

The exercises opened at 11 o'clock and for an hour before the time the people began to gather at the church, and the many teams that came into town with wagons loaded with entire families showed the interest which the people in the surrounding country take in the exercises of Commencement day.

Before the hour of opening arrived the church was filled with an eager company. The gallery and all the seats in the body of the house were packed and a double row of chairs was placed in the aisles and quickly filled.

Vice-President Ellis took his place upon the platform to preside over the exercises with Hon. A. [illegible] Prof. Marsh of the college faculty upon either side. The other members of the board as well as the members of the graduating class occupied seats upon the platform at one end with the choir seated at the other end.

Scattered through the audience were many alumni and friends of the university from [illegible] and elsewhere. The following is the programme of the exercises:

Quartet—"The Earth is the Lord's" (Mayer)
Mrs. Mills and Wilkinson, Messrs. Mills, [illegible]
Prayer.

JUNIOR CLASS.

Oration—Influence of Religion upon Art
J. Wheelock Marsh
Oration—"Relation of Natural Science to National Progress"
James R. Marsh
Duet—Greeting (Mendelssohn)
Mrs. Wilkinson and Miss Knight

GRADUATING CLASS

Oration—"Success, Seeming and Real"
Marion C. Adams, Hillsboro.
Oration—"Generative Power of Ideas"
Silas M. Shipley, Forest Grove
Piano Solo—Witches Dance (Paganini)
Mrs. Edwards.
Essay and Valedictory—"Castles and their Queens"... Maggie J. Macrum, Forest Grove
Solo—"The Charmers" (Mendelssohn)
Miss Knight.
Commencement Address—"Poets and Poetry of Greece" James Browne, M. D., LL. D.
Conferring Degrees
Double Quartet—"The Arrow and the Song" (Hay[illegible])
Misses Knight, Macrum, Marsh, McDonald
Messrs. Mills, Marsh, Bailey, Clark.
Benediction

After the opening piece of music—a quartet beautifully rendered—prayer was offered by Rev. H. S. Mills, pastor of the First Congregational church at Forest Grove.

Then came the orations by the members of the junior class, followed by another piece of music. Then the orations of the graduating class closing after a piano solo with an essay and valedictory by Miss Macrum, who had completed the ladies course.

We make no attempt to dissect or discuss any of the orations. They were all good, showing thought and careful labor in their preparation, and were on the whole well delivered. No one in the audience we think failed to catch every word.

Without any distinctive criticisms which would be invidious, we only remark that the character of the junior orations compared well with those of the graduating class, and augurs well for the orations that shall be delivered at the next commencement, when these young men shall be among the graduates.

The valedictory was exceedingly appropriate and graceful and was gracefully delivered. We insert it here entire. It is understood that Miss Macrum goes next fall to Boston to spend some years in study of music and elocution.

VALEDICTORY.

The time has come when our relations as students with Pacific university must cease forever. By the courtesy of my classmates the honor as well as the delicate task of addressing you a parting word becomes mine. I feel deeply how utterly inadequate I am to truly represent our class and convey to you the emotions of our hearts at this our parting hour. No one who has not had the experience of such an occasion can realize the embarrassment of such a moment.

Honorable Board of Trustees: We most heartily and cordially recognize your great kindness in establishing and maintaining this institution of learning, making it possible for us to obtain an education. You have spared no pains in securing grounds richly adorned by nature and providing for the erection of buildings. You have procured able instructors and secured the means necessary to defray expenses. For all your foresight and beneficence we desire to express our gratitude, and it is our parting wish that you may be enabled to provide even more bountifully for those who come after us, and that generations yet to come may arise and call you blessed.

Kind Teachers: The sacred relation that has so long existed between us must now terminate. Long have we regarded you as more than friend, as having an interest in us only second to that of parent.

Our individual welfare and success have been your anxious solicitude for several years. Your work is similar to that of a sculptor in that it has been yours to take us in the rough and mold us into some form. The consciousness of being artisans preparing human beings to fill places in the world must be the great stimulus to your patient and continuous effort. Through all our school life here it has been ours to be directed and encouraged in our work by you. Should we attain to any distinction in our life work we have you to thank for the preparation given us. We cannot express to you in words the gratitude of our hearts, for it must continue to grow as we realize through experience, more of the value of your teaching.

May it please you to erase from the tablet of your memory our faults and failures and let only such impressions of us as shall be pleasant to recall. Praying God to reward you richly for your noble work in the elevation of mankind we reluctantly say Farewell.

To our fellow students who remain we desire to wave back words of cheer and encouragement. Soon you may join our ranks if you only persevere. If possible let nothing divert you from your determination to graduate. When you come to stand where we do to-day you will then realize that the time has been too short to prepare for life work; therefore after a summer's rest take up your work with renewed vigor and with courage persevere to the end.

Classmates: the path trodden by many before us has not been an easy way but well we know that it is only by overcoming these mountains of difficulty, by smoothing the rough places and making straight the crooked, that we become true men and women.

We have reached the goal of our school ambition. It seems as if we had arrived at a great central depot, with the serious question confronting us as to which train we shall now take.

Our work thus far has been only preparatory for life work which we now must choose. Let our choice be such as will honor God and benefit mankind.

Following the valedictory came a solo, "The Charmers," charmingly rendered by Miss Knight.

Dr. James Browne of Portland was then introduced and delivered the commencement address. It was a masterly portrayal of Greek [illegible] Poetry. We make no attempt to analyze it. The speaker showed a deep and accurate acquaintance with the brilliant literary lights of that nation to whom as he said, we owe more than to any other nation in all history save the one that gave us Moses and Jesus. The address formed a fitting close to the literary exercises of the occasion. It was followed by the conferring of degrees, which was done by Prof. Joseph W. Marsh. The degree of M. S. was conferred upon Miss Maggie J. Macrum, of B. S. upon Silas M. Shipley, of A. B. upon Marion C. Adams.

After a beautiful song, a double quartet, the benediction was pronounced by Rev. G. H. Atkinson, D. D., and the audience was dismissed.

ALUMNI DINNER.

At 2 o'clock the members of the Association of Alumni, with invited guests, assembled in M[illegible] hall for Alumni dinner. About fifty gentlemen and ladies gathered there. [illegible] handsomely decorated and loaded with good things. The serving of the dinner had been placed in charge of Mrs. S. A. [illegible], [illegible] old time reputation for providing [illegible] the wants of the inner man.

Grace was said by Rev. Myron Eells, and after full justice had been done to the viands, W. N. Barrett, Esq., president of the alumni, called the tables to order and with a few introductory remarks called upon one and another of the guests and alumni present to respond to sentiments proposed and to give a message from the class to which the speaker belonged. Most of the classes that the university has graduated were represented at the dinner, and from all came assurances of interest in their common alma mater, and a desire to see her work prosper in all respects. After an hour spent in this pleasant manner, the invited guests withdrew and the regular annual business meeting of the associate alumni was held. At 8 o'clock came the

UNIVERSITY RECEPTION,

At the president's house. The rooms were crowded and all the guests seemed to be enjoying themselves. With its close, terminated one of the most successful commencement seasons that Pacific university has witnessed.

THE ACADEMY

Has taken a new departure for the better. Under the very efficient management of Principal Edwards during the year past, President Ellis is realizing his admirable idea of the true academic work. This idea is assuming form in the classification of the students according to the studies of the prescribed courses; so that students are taking the several studies in their order of sequence and begin to find themselves in classes and under the bond and stimulus of the class spirit, which greatly aids in carrying them along. Thus the academy is to be in reality as well as in name a feeder of the college—it now, in fact, organizes its students for college and brings them up to its doors in the bonds of class association to enter upon the higher work. This year a class of eleven thus comes to the front, with the middle class of [illegible] numbering twenty five following.

The graduating exercises of the academic class of '85 with their motto "Looking to the End" (the college), with their badges to place them in the eyes of all beholders with the class of '86, also went off [illegible] and with their bright and comely faces and literary productions promise well for the future of Pacific university.

DEPARTMENT OF MUSIC

Another new feature of the school this year has been the musical department. The trustees [illegible] fitted a fine large room in the ladies' hall to this work. Mrs. Edwards, wife of the principal of the academy, was chosen musical director.

Mrs. Edwards came from the Oberlin conservatory. She brought with her quite a library of standard music, but more important, a fine musical culture, an adaptability to teaching and a perfect familiarity with the advanced ideas of an eastern conservatory. Mrs. Edwards has taught during the year standard music entirely, and the way students have taken hold of it and so rapidly improved shows that there is more in the fine harmonies and beautiful symphonies of Mendelssohn and Mozart and the like than in the trash of many of our popular American writers, and further that a delicate touch and soft melody far surpass the noise and pound that is sometimes taught.

The musical department works very satisfactorily as a branch of the university, giving to students who so desire it a chance to take music in connection with their other studies, and its [illegible] the academy and college.

This music work has received very hearty support during the year. There have been thirty two students in the department, and others have been refused admittance because it was impossible for one teacher to do more work. For this reason it has been found necessary to employ an assistant for the coming year. The assistant comes highly recommended from an eastern conservatory. It is thought the two teachers will be able to accommodate all who find their way here with the desire to study music.

The general interest in music awakened during the year, the cultivation of the taste as to the style of music, the rapid progress of the students amounting in some cases to [illegible] accomplishment, certainly bespeak a bright future for this department.

It is [illegible]

THE ART ROOM

The graceful beauty of the college campus and the tasteful exterior of the ladies' hall would lead us to expect taste and beauty within.

And in this respect we shall not be disappointed. The first room to the left as we enter the west entrance of the hall is the art room.

Miss L. Emma Cornelius, well known to many outside of Forest Grove as an artist of taste and skill, and is one especially prepared by nature and experience for teaching her favorite art, presides over this department.

We find the walls of her pleasant little studio fairly lined with studies, some of her own, more by her pupils.

The three divisions of the work taught here, painting, crayon sketching and drawing, are each fully represented. Crayon work seems to be especially popular. In it we noticed all the way from a bunch of grapes to the Venus de Milo. We notice among the paintings, numerous [illegible] reproduce the sharp [illegible] of Mt. Hood in full view in all its native grandeur from our hall and college grounds.

But time forbids the special mention of any of these carefully studied and patiently executed works. It must suffice to call the attention of friends of Pacific university and of education in general, to the present greatly enlarged facilities for this class of attractive and refining studies. It may be justly expected that this line of work, while not diminishing the close attention to the solid studies for which this school has been justly noted, will introduce into the school and through it into the community a new element of taste and love of beauty and art.

The friends of the school and Miss Cornelius will gladly congratulate both on the grand success of this pioneer work in the department of art.

PENMANSHIP

This department under the direction of Prof. J. M. Garrison has been conducted most successfully, and Pacific university intends henceforth that all her students shall have abundant opportunity for instruction in this important feature of a practical education. A large number of her students are already very justly proud of their attainments in this line. Three full courses in writing are given each year to which all pupils are admitted without extra charge. No more favorable opportunity is offered in the state for young men and women to acquire an elegant style of penmanship than is now offered at Pacific university.

COMMENCEMENT NOTES.

Hon. E. B. McElroy, state superintendent, was present at the exercises at Pacific university on Wednesday.

Penmanship, vocal and instrumental music, drawing and painting are prominent departments in Pacific university.

The number of alumni present was larger than in some years, though [illegible]

Martin and wife, Mrs. Dr. Culbreath, Adelaide Poppleton.

POLITICAL EXPRESSION

Thomas A. Hendricks's proper title is [illegible] extraordinary and [illegible] plenipotentiary.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Cleveland Leader: The small number of mugwumps in Cleveland is agitating the office hunters [illegible] that he considers the whole tribe of [illegible] partisans.

The Boston Post should [illegible] papers which it claims say that President Cleveland is giving the country the best administration it ever had.

Detroit Post: The President is reported to have said that Secretary Bayard is the most unselfish man in his cabinet. Perhaps this is because Senator Bayard gives away the administration's offices.

The new party in Kansas is known as the "Drug wumps" and composed of those who get their liquor from druggists on physicians' certificates threatens to absorb the whole democratic party in that state.

Philadelphia Press: Speaker Carlisle admits that President Cleveland is doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances. Mr. Carlisle should have gone a step further and given his opinion of the circumstances.

Philadelphia Press: Secretary Bayard will address the students of the university of Mississippi on Thomas Jefferson. It may be worth while to explain that Thomas Jefferson had the honor of being acquainted with Mr. Bayard's great uncle.

New York Times: Why has Mr. Vilas nominated such a ruffian as C. B. Meade to be postmaster at Hazlehurst, Miss.? Meade was a leader in the Copiah county outrages and presided over a meeting which passed resolutions approving the murder of Matthews.

Milwaukee Journal: Some of the democratic organs which are giggling at John Logan's grammatical errors now will find less difficulty perhaps, in analyzing the same gentleman's sentences next winter, when he moves that the nominations of offensive partisans be not confirmed.

Philadelphia North American: [illegible]

New York Tribune: In the nature of things Bayard and Manning agree like fire and water. As Mr. Cleveland was not physically blind and deaf at the time his cabinet was in process of formation he must have known that the two principal members of that body represented the opposing forces which have for twenty years struggled for control in the democratic party.

New York Herald: It is announced that ex-Minister Lowell has made his last public speech in England and has engaged his passage home. He left his native commonwealth a literary man. He returns a public man. After his long diplomatic [illegible] abroad no doubt Massachusetts will be prouder of him than ever. Query: Will the republicans of the Bay State think of making him their next governor?

Pulpit and Press

Waterbury (Conn.) American.

We do not think the clergy have any stones to throw at editors from the glass house in which they [illegible] distinctions between papers as they would not [illegible] editors to make distinctions between clergymen in criticising the cloth.

They Will Not Do It

Those who once take Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" will never consent to use any other cathartic. They are pleasant to take and mild in their operation. Smaller than ordinary pills. Inclosed in glass vials, virtues unimpaired. By druggists.

Type-setting Record Beaten

NEW YORK, June 4.—A type setting contest between Joseph McCann of the Herald and I. A. Sommers of the World, for a purse of $500, was decided to-day. The men set for three hours. McCann set 6825 ems of solid minion without a paragraph, and Sommers 6022. In the first hour McCann set 2123 ems, beating the best previous record, that of 2064 ems, made by a compositor named George Arensberg in 1870 in New York.

CHRISTIAN ART

A Commencement Address before the Ladies of St. Helen's Hall, on the 9th inst. by Prof. Richard H. Thornton

Ladies of St. Helen's Hall: When the bishop of Oregon requested me to deliver an address to you on some topic relating to Christian education, I felt at first that the task was not only somewhat difficult in itself, but also quite outside the limit of my own study and reading. On further consideration, however, I thought of one topic, perhaps sufficiently connected with the general subject thus set before me, in which I have long taken an interest. And I propose to say a few words to you on what, for the sake of conciseness, I will call Needlework.

Now I know very well the thought which has in an instant suggested itself to all of you. You are saying to yourselves, "What can a man know about needlework?" Well, I have a satisfactory answer to that question. Some one on a certain occasion remarked to Dr. Johnson that Mallet's tragedy of Elvira was a very poor one, but added: "We have hardly a right to abuse the tragedy, for, bad as it is, how vain should either of us be to write one not near so good." The sturdy doctor disposed of this fallacy at once, saying: "Why, no, sir, this is not just reasoning. You may abuse a tragedy, though you cannot write one. You may scold a carpenter who has made a bad table, though you cannot make a table. It is not your trade to make tables." And so the general principle is clear enough that a person may know something about a particular art without being a worker in that art himself. And I might begin by reminding you how very old the art of ornamental needlework is. I wonder if that has ever occurred to you in a distinct and tangible manner. And then, not only is this art immeasurably ancient, but the earliest allusions to it of which we have any trace show us that the [illegible] wonderful dexterity in its exercise. When the mother of Sisera looked out from her lattice, expecting her son's triumphant return from the slaughter of the Israelites, she allotted to him a prize, which, as you well know, he never obtained. And what was that prize? To Sisera, a prey of divers colors. But that is not all—a prey of divers colors of needlework, and, what is even more remarkable, some two and thirty centuries ago, Sisera was to have a prey of divers colors of needlework on both sides, meet for the necks of them that take the spoil. And this phrase "on both sides" means, I suppose, that both sides of the material were to be decorated with needlework. We find, also, many years before this, that the veil or curtain of the tabernacle which was in the wilderness was embroidered with figures of angels, both on the side which faced the holy place and on that which faced the holy of holies, as to the symbolic meaning of which embroidery, much might be said, if this were the proper time and place. And Homer, who is generally considered a contemporary of King Solomon, tells us (Od. vi.) of women who sat by the hearth, and wove yarn of a stain of sea-purple, which was a wonder to behold. And in another place he tells us (Od. xviii.) of an embroidered robe, great and very beautiful, wherein were brooches of gold, twelve in all, fitted with well bent clasps. He tells us also of the famous web of Penelope, and of the distaff of Helen of Troy which was charged with wool of a violet blue.

But it is not my purpose to describe in detail the history of needlework. Such an inquiry, although interesting, would occupy too much time, nor am I at all sure that I could do justice to it, if this difficulty were removed. I wish merely to say a word or two on the subject of Christian art, and I have alluded particularly to needlework, because that is the department of Christian art in which ladies are peculiarly skillful.

Christian art of necessity concentrates itself in and about Christian churches. It has done so, certainly ever since the close of the tenth and last persecution, but especially since the days of Charlemagne. Now it is abundantly evident that Almighty God never intended the material fabric of His churches to be mean and disgraceful, or the service rendered therein to be bare and unattractive. And yet men have frequently chosen to set up a different standard, as though what is dismal were peculiarly sacred, and what is ornate and grand were, after some occult fashion, a provocative to villainy—as if, in fact, God had appeared out of Sion, not (as we read) in perfect beauty, but in desolate and unmitigated ugliness. Some years ago I was talking with a gentleman, of whom I will say that his zeal in religion greatly outran his knowledge. He was a member of a peculiar, a very peculiar body of Christians, who used to delight in drawing room addresses by fervid evangelists, with tea and coffee to follow. Said he to me: "I have come to this conclusion that this method of building fine churches is all wrong. What we want is iron rooms with plain benches and a wooden desk at the end." I suggested that Solomon would hardly have agreed with him in that matter. A smile of condescension at once lighted up his countenance, and he replied "Ah but we are living in another dispensation." And this circumstance, that we are living in another dispensation, was to him the end of all controversy,—as though we had come out of a dispensation of cloth of gold to live in a dispensation of sackcloth and of broomsticks! Nothing, says Goethe, is more terrible than active ignorance. And when active ignorance is coupled with fanaticism, the combination is disastrous. We know what devastation has been wrought by savage men in the past, under the cloak and pretense of excessive godliness. Oliver Cromwell, who prated much about serving the Lord and who died with—well, with a remarkable misstatement upon his lips, stabled his horses in the cathedral of old St. Paul's in London. Those were indeed days of trouble and rebuke and blasphemy. The church was in exile. Bishops and priests and deacons were utterly proscribed. A certain Puritan general proclaimed the abolition of Christmas day at Abingdon, and sent out his warrants for men to work on that day especially. The city newspaper of the same period stated that it was more probable that our Savior was born in September than in December, and quoted "a late reverend minister's opinion that God did conceal the time when Christ was born, upon the same reason that He took away the body of Moses—that they might not put an holiness upon that day." But why do I linger on this matter? Ruin was triumphant. The soldiers of the commonwealth amused themselves with baptizing various animals in the fonts of the churches. Isaac Disraeli tells us of one Dowsing, a grim and graceless vagabond, who went about breaking such church windows as in his opinion contained emblems of superstition, and at Grantham, says he, we brake twelve great angels in glass, and elsewhere we destroyed such and such windows representing God the Holy Ghost. Things like this are worth recalling, because we have almost forgotten them. In those most unhappy times of the seventeenth century, men did literally break down the carved work of the sanctuary with axes and hammers. And what of the eighteenth century? I need only say that Archbishop [illegible] most appropriately called that the siesta period of the English church, and we know very well that one cannot at the same time take a siesta and be engaged in repairing his house. The nineteenth century, however, has commenced a renaissance, which the twentieth is likely to continue, if not to consummate. And so things are gradually improving. And yet how many places there are which the light has not in any degree penetrated! I read in the paper a few weeks ago, that the Calvinists of Holland are accustomed to cover the middles of their places of religious meeting with whitewash, and that the men smoke pipes while the sermon is being preached. Of course that is palpably shocking. Smoking in sermon time will be disapproved by thousands of persons who are yet not sufficiently educated to appreciate that aggregation of decorum in church which is popularly called ritualism. But if we may take leave of my friend who believed in a dispensation of broomsticks, and go to the Old Testament, we shall find that every suggestion of religious propriety, and every gift of religious art comes from God. The men who designed and executed the fine work of the tabernacle are said to have been filled with the spirit of God in wisdom, and understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship. Notice how the operation of the divine spirit is connected with artistic work both manual and mental, "to devise curious works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass, and in cutting of stones to set them, and in carving of wood, to make any manner of cunning work." And if we read a little further, (Exod. xxxv.) we shall find something about needlework also. The Lord is said to have filled these men with wisdom of heart, to work all manner of work of the engraver, and of the cunning workman, and of the embroiderer, in blue, and in scarlet, and in fine linen, and all manner of work of the weaver. It is added, that all the women that were wise-hearted did spin with their hands, and brought that which they had spun. Here, by the way, we find that the wise-hearted women did the spinning, and the men in whom was the spirit of God did the embroidery. But in later ages almost all church embroidery has been wrought by women and, if the Septuagint version of the book of Job is correct, we are therein clearly told that God has given to women the knowledge of embroidery. Coming down to the days of the building of the first temple, we find that Hiram, a man of the tribe of Naphtali, who lived at Tyre, was filled (1 Kings, vii.) with wisdom and understanding and cunning to work all works in brass. Now, if any one says that all this is true, but that the spirit of God, in wisdom, and in understanding, and in knowledge, and in workmanship, did not rest upon those men and women who have given us the best examples of Christian art, it seems to me that such a person is convicted out of his own mouth of the most outrageous and manifest foolishness. The gift that was in Fra Angelico and in Overbeck, the gift that was in the men who planned the cathedral of Lincoln, and the cathedral of Rouen, and the cathedral of St. Mark in Venice, churches which some of you will no doubt some day visit, the spirit that was in those men who wrought in stained glass in the middle ages, and in those devout women who adorned with needlework the altars which devout men had raised, this gift, in all its opulent variety of application, was undoubtedly from above and came down from the father of lights, while the spirit of barrenness and iconoclasm always has come, and always will come, from beneath.

But it is given to men and generations of men to quench, if they so choose, some or all of the workings of the spirit of God, at least during their period of dominion. How completely the artistic sense was quenched in the days of our grandfathers and great grandfathers, the relics of their church architecture fully show, and not the relics of their architecture only. Imagine an oblong building, such as I have myself seen, with an immense gallery, and a ponderous three decker pulpit, and an altar worse than a good kitchen table, with an old rag of moth eaten baize flung over it. Figure to yourselves the worthy man who ascends to an almost interminable staircase, enveloped in a voluminous gown of solemn black, and at length is carefully shut in by the verger, and commences an hour-long sermon. Listen to the doggerel into which the Psalms are turned. This [illegible] with us yet, when we sing (for example) that verse about "fresh altars" and "well tuned harps" as if any one could raise a fresh altar, in the sense of the Psalm, or could use more than one harp at a time. If I should give you other examples I think you would all agree with me that metrical Psalms ought to be avoided as men avoid a pestilence, and this with a very few exceptions.

Christian art does not delight in tawdriness of ornamentation, or in ornaments which are other than what they pretend to be. A vase filled with artificial flowers, and used to adorn a church, is an abomination and a fraud. Artificial flowers, I may add, whether of wax or of paper, are at the best of very trifling artistic value. And, as a general principle, that which is plain and reverent is always better than that which is elaborate and slovenly. Let me show you an example of that dignified simplicity which conforms itself to the true ideal. In your chapel of St. Stephen the figure of the patron is displayed in the window over the altar. He carries the emblems of his martyrdom. He stands under the "Tree of Life." His face is radiant with that glory which illumined it when they who saw it beheld, as it were, the face of an angel. And the artist, with equal boldness and felicity, has relieved the whole subject with a dark background. Nothing could be simpler, or more beautiful or befitting, than all this. And if you never particularly observed the delicacy with which the bands of the figure are delineated, you should visit the chapel and make that window a special study.

Now, I could say a good deal more to you about stained glass, but it would be unwise now to attempt a detailed discussion either of this or of anything else, for I am anxious that you should not only receive what I say, insofar as it may be founded in truth, with transient approval, but should take away with you some lasting benefit. Horace, in explaining the qualities of good poetry, exhorts his friends to cultivate the Greek exemplars by night and by day, to think in the spirit of Homer and of the masters of tragedy and comedy. Allow me to exhort you with like assiduity to make yourselves familiar with the writings of John Ruskin. Observe what he has to say about clouds, and mountains, and the sea, and trees, and Venice, and the Divine Comedy, and peace, and righteousness, which is justice, a righteousness not intended to [illegible] people from cheating and slander and unkindness, and wrong doing generally, as between man and man. Many of you will be enjoying the scenery of [illegible] this summer. How comes it that you have any appreciation of such things? Listen to what Mr. Ruskin says of the sense of the beauty of landscape: "[illegible] painting, that cultivation can be given. Also, the faculties which are thus received are hereditary; so that the child of an educated race has an innate instinct of beauty, derived from arts practised hundreds of years before its birth." (Oxford Lectures on Art.) Some of you are no doubt studying the art of painting on canvas. Let me read you what Mr. Ruskin says about the use of color: "A bad colorist does not love beautiful color better than the best colorist does, nor half so much. But he indulges in it to excess, he uses it in large masses, and unsubdued; and then it is a law of nature, a law as universal as that of gravitation, that he shall not be able to enjoy it so much as if he had used it in less quantity. The great painter is sternly temperate in his work. He loves the vivid color with all his heart; but for a long time he does not allow himself anything like it, nothing but sober browns and dull grays and colors which have no conceivable beauty in them; but these, under his government, become lovely; and after bringing out of them all the life and power they possess, and enjoying them to the uttermost, cautiously, and as the crown of his work, and the consummation of its music, he permits the momentary crimson and azure, and the whole canvas is in a flame." (Stones of Venice, vol. iii, ch. i.) Now these things are worth reading and worth remembering. And therefore I say, get Mr. Ruskin's works and read them until you are saturated with the spirit of them. Read especially his "Modern Painters" and his "Seven Lamps of Architecture." You will find there much about many things, and something about needlework. You will find an ample recognition of that great principle which is expressed in the motto of your graduating class, Nulla [illegible] pulvere. The dust of the conflict comes first, and the joy of the victory comes afterwards. The Roman poet speaks of the dust raised by the chariot in its rapid course, and of the goal skillfully turned by the glowing wheels, and then of the noble palm which placed the conqueror as it were among the gods. The greater the effort, the higher is in general the result. The goldsmith's work, for example, of Benvenuto Cellini, or the potter's work of Palissy, or the forge-work of Quentin Matsys, represents enormous industry as well as ingenuity, and the artistic worth of it is correspondingly immense. The modern workman is apt to [illegible]

Young ladies, you will in course of time be scattered over this magnificent western land. Magnificent it unquestionably is. The valley of the Willamette alone exceeds in area any New England state excepting Maine, and this is as fertile as the other is sterile. I believe that no living man has any adequate notion of what Oregon will be in fifty years from this present. These productive regions will be dotted with prosperous cities. New railroads will afford easy access to the mountains. New seaports will be constructed, whereby the products of India and China and Australia and South America and Japan will be more abundantly and conveniently carried to your doors. Wealth will be accumulated such as might in the days of old have purchased the domains of Attalus, such as might in our own day, if men were so disposed, realize in fact the unexecuted designs of Michael Angelo. And what will be the condition of the apostolic church, in the Oregon of the future? Will it be exclusive and meagre and timid, or will it be comprehensive, and luminous, and vigorous, and glorious? The answer to this question depends largely upon those who are now laying foundations. It depends, perhaps in a greater measure than you dream, upon yourselves. A hundred torches, lighted at one common fire, may produce a wide illumination. And your intellects, instructed and enkindled at St. Helen's hall, may, in a most legitimate sphere, exert a pervading influence. Therefore I would say, as the sum of the whole matter, let your best energies be devoted to the development of the beauty of the earthly sanctuary, and the extension of the dignity of public worship. First understand what Christian art is, and then do all you can to foster it. Discourage every manifestation of that parsimonious and narrow conservatism, to call it by no worse name, which has been as a millstone about the neck of the church, and has stifled Christian art, half the world over, for many generations. And remember that not only is the king's daughter all glorious within, but her clothing is of wrought gold, and she shall be brought before the king in a vesture of needlework.

BACCALAUREATE SERMON

Delivered by President Ellis of the Pacific University—Subject "Duty."

[The sermon [illegible] printed last week, but through [illegible] its entirety.]

[illegible] when ye shall have done all the things that are commanded you, [illegible] unprofitable servants: we have done that which it was our duty to do.

My theme for this occasion is Duty. To some ears the word has a harsh sound. It is my ambition to make it musical to your ears. Duty woos us with substantial charms. It rewards with fadeless crowns and enduring riches.

Perhaps there is occasion that we be at pains to understand this matter. A week ago walking home from church a gentleman, wholly devoid of narrow and bigoted notions of conduct, said to me that this is a frivolous age. Of course I think he is right in his view, for he agrees with me. It is also true that we may say good things, some most excellent things, of this age. This friend and I are not soured in our sympathies and do not look at things with refracted vision when we call this age frivolous. We see and freely acknowledge the seriousness, the earnestness and the devotion which, while quieter and better behaved than frivolity, carry the world onward and upward. On the other hand while we recognize with much delight the high merits of this age we are not blind to its follies and its sins. Therefore we see and charge against it that one of its prominent characteristics is frivolousness. It would take much less than an hour to substantiate the charge with convincing proofs. But this is out of the present line of discussion. However it is because of this frivolousness that I think it proper to magnify duty and make it honorable in this educational age. Duty is inevitable. I will not say it is unavoidable, for it is easy to evade it. But evasion of it does not dethrone and remove it from our lives. It abides permanently in most regal authority and makes daily and hourly claim upon both thought and action. Duty is one of the truly heroic words. Every heroic age has been an age of duty-doing.

"Stern daughter of the voice of God" sings Wordsworth of duty, which is not any idle poetic fancy, but the everlasting truth. So Mazzini understood it when, struggling for the liberty of his country, he wrote that "every mission constitutes a pledge of duty. Every man is bound to consecrate his every faculty to its fulfillment. He will derive his rule of action from the profound conviction of that duty." In the vocabulary of duty belong such words as ought and ought not, obligation, responsibility, accountability, law, morals, right and wrong and conscience. Duty is only another term for moral science which floods and pervades the whole of life as the atmosphere covers the world, filling every void, bearing with steady pressure downward, outward, upward at every point on every object, great and small alike. This pressure of atmosphere over the world exactly figures the pressure of duty in human life. In the world nothing is too small or too large to escape the atmosphere. So in life every thought, every action is within the kingdom of duty. When the tides from the sea flow in upon the shore they do not stop at the broad open beach. They find their way up rivers, into great bays and far extending inlets. And still the tide keeps on, filling every little channel that empties into tidewater, seeking out and flooding the thousands of recesses hidden away along all the shores of creek, river and bay. You may travel for miles and miles along these shores and everywhere hear the ripple of the tide persistently washing up about the roots of trees, fallen timbers, tufts of grass and sod, solitary stones, worn rocks, and earth channeled, hollowed and scooped out after many patterns by the water. You will be surprised, and wonder again and again to find into what infinite numbers of small and remote cavities and vacancies the tide reaches. You cannot count them if you would, yet the tide runs into them all, completely flooding them, as naturally and easily as it breaks upon the open ocean shore. I wish to-day to put a persuasive voice into this great, generous, all-pervading ocean tide that may speak to you of duty. Flowing into life from the vast surrounding ocean of infinity breaks constantly the tide of duty. There is this difference: the duty tide, unlike the ocean tide, never ebbs. And this difference also: nothing in life rises above the duty tide as many things along the shore rise above the ocean tide.

May not this reflection make us deeply thoughtful that life is surrounded by such an infinite and wonderful ocean that from its vast bosom the tide of duty always flows full and strong and knows no ebb, and that it reaches and pervades all the remotest and minutest recesses of heart and conduct. They that listen hear the ripple of duty away up in the hidden chambers of the soul and on in the far and secluded actions and habits of life. The tide of duty pervades the secrecies and privacies no less than the more social and public interests and activities. Duty floods our life. James Anthony Froude states it in this way: "In common things the law of sacrifice takes the form of positive duty." In these words the historian and essayist carries the thought to a higher plane than the preacher—he not only affirms duty in common things but presses it to the pitch of sacrifice even in our least affairs. With such voluntary and unprofessional sanction you will not be so ready to accuse me of extravagance in asserting that duty is an all-embracing and all-pervading atmosphere and tide. Let none of us draw back as if it were a hard saying. Duty is not hard. If it seems so there is danger. For we can easily eject its commands, but duty never forgets the violation. I have read over and over this sentence till it lives in my memory: "He who is false to present duty breaks a thread in the loom, and will find the flaw when he may have forgotten its cause." That sentence is my key to many and many a failure. People want to succeed, but do not, and cannot understand it. They may whine and complain bitterly, or be angry and blame somebody severely, and only make matters worse. Few misfortunes are more melancholy and pathetic than failure on account of violated duty, when the offense has gone out of mind. Disappointment mingles gall with their cup of expected delight, and they wonder why it is so. It is violated duty's penalty. Transgressors have short memories, but because they forget is no sign that the deed disappears from the faithful record of the life. They may weave away, but the broken thread will show, and certainly discount the fabric in this market, where sooner or later duty determines value.

But it does not help matters when the transgressor does not forget the offense to duty that blights the after years. Of the many things I see as I go about some one scene here and there impresses itself with peculiar distinctness. One of these scenes recurs to me in this connection. It was on the streets of our state capital. Because it is a sample of a not uncommon experience I recite it. It was a young wife in company with an intoxicated husband. Her sensitiveness to the shame and degradation was probably what so vividly burned the scene into my memory. How she shrunk from the beastly companionship! Her silent agony she could not conceal. There was no hiding of her deep humiliation. Her very heartache expressed itself in every feature and every action. Manifestly she was unused to such things. And at that time she had not seen it often enough to harden her into a helpless and hopeless endurance. Though she had the heartache she was not as yet heart broken. I do not know what has happened since. Since then heartache may have broken her heart altogether. She may now be in her grave or worse, the living victim of a sot. But then she was proud-spirited and angry, and my hope has been that she got him home and flogged him sober, and made him sign the pledge under the lash. For I believe in the woman's right of a wife to flog a drunken husband every time he drinks till he quits. But there is a far better article in my creed than that. I believe in a girl's queenly right not to [illegible] with a fast young man. She is false to her womanly duty in such associations—she takes not single threads, but the very woof of her life, so that the loom yields only shreds and tatters. Yes, but the young man is gay and stylish, and such good company. There's nothing [illegible] about the fast young man—he just suits. Well, then, take him. I am not sure that he is able to think so desert anything better. It's the best fortune that ever befalls the slow young man that he does not have much to do with the ladies who incline to the fast young man. If the latter just suits, then take him, and take with him any amount of neglect, shame, sorrow, misery and ruin. For I know that duty denounces judgment with authority. And duty declares that women of character who associate with men without strict requirement as to character in them, are tripping gayly along in by-paths that hurry them out upon wide wastes of wretchedness from which there is no way back. I need not linger to prove this to the thoughtful. To state it is enough for them. To the thoughtless proof is wasted effort.

But my thought refuses to leave just yet this queenly duty of women to make men better. It is not in the power of my poor speech to tell you how much there is now at stake in this country. The gloomiest cloud that overhangs my hope for the next generation and the next century is that of the corrupting indulgences of young men. My fears are not groundless. About a month ago I read from the Chicago Inter-Ocean a paragraph headed "Decaying Manhood," and running in these words: "Out of thirty-two young men of New York city who were examined last week for West Point cadetships, only nine were accepted as physically sound. Such a note might well make the young men of our cities pause for a moment's thought. No man who violates the laws of health can have a healthy body. How few there are who do not study fashion and humor appetite more than they do the laws that pertain to a healthful body. Beer, the cigarette, too much amusement and the hidden vices are making havoc with the physical manhood of all our towns and cities." Thus preaches a Chicago daily from a text in which but nine out of thirty-two young men are found physically sound. Isn't it a startling text? Twenty-three of the thirty-two emasculated by popular indulgences and almost popular vices! Twenty-three of the thirty-two—almost three to one—young men *un*manned, already in the fresh morning of manhood—their blood thickened and sluggish, nerves shattered and untrustworthy, muscular fibre coarse and degenerated, vital organs diseased and debilitated, the entire bodily system disordered, and its manifold functions of health and manliness fatally impaired. Decaying manhood written on every feature and every organ, in the very life blood and in the complexion, is a startling sermon. It is a sermon of solemn warning, and unless heeded, it is a sermon of doom. No nation can survive such a wreckage of its young men. We have vitality in this country to outlive anything—war, pestilence, famine—except decaying manhood in our young men, that means swift destruction.

Yet those twenty-three emasculated wrecks can sport little canes, wear diamonds, be jolly and have plenty of lady friends. A thousand shames upon such silly womanhood, as well as a thousand curses upon such guilty manhood. These reckless girls are scarcely less to blame than these fast and wicked boys. There is a sense in which the sin of one augments the duty of another. This monstrous sinning of young men increases the grand duty of young women to gather their skirts aside and walk resolutely apart from their defiled manhood. I know, I know it is in the power of young women to save the young men of this generation by proudly and fearlessly denying their society to the fast young men. Most certainly I know how both parties can talk about this course of action. The young man can get on his dignity, and talk in high strain how he doesn't care. To be sure he doesn't care so long as he can be dissolute and still be in favor with decent women. But he does care when decent women absolutely decline his style and dash and [illegible], his ready spending money and his wit. If there is anything worth the saving left in a young man, it is in the power of young women to save him by accepting his attentions on the unyielding condition that he keep himself undefiled.

Young women can make light of such a rule of requirement, and dare the fates by giddy disregard of it. But I am speaking now in the name and by the majestic authority of duty. Coming into this hour from all the infinite years is this demand of duty upon young womanhood to ascend her throne of power and not abdicate for any pleasure, and to wield her power for the saving of American manhood. I know of what I am talking: the twentieth century and the twenty-fifth, the coming millennium and eternity, entreat the dawning womanhood of these closing years of the nineteenth century to take an inflexible stand for bodily soundness and moral cleanness in the young men of our time. And there is no time to be lost. Scores and hundreds are already gone beyond recovery. "Consequences are pitiless," said Miss MacConnell in her keen-thoughted address last evening. These scores and hundreds of young men are already caught in the current of Niagara and nothing can recover them. And for scores come hundreds and for hundreds come thousands down the same strong current of indulgence—encouraged in their perilous pleasuring by the charm and smiles of fair women. These scores and hundreds must go over the thundering precipice—there is no help—but something may be done for the imperiled hundreds and thousands who are following hard after, if it be done quickly. This is duty's high behest.

I feel called upon by propriety to beg pardon of this audience and this graduating class for pursuing this duty of young womanhood so far. I do not ask pardon in order to take back anything, but to assure you of the supreme importance attaching to it. The soberest convictions of ten years past are molten in these last ten minutes and remain molten in my heart at a white heat. At much pains we breed stock. Duty demands that at greater pains we breed manhood, and that we go about it in the shortest possible order. And now in a more general way suffer me to touch two points. 1. Mention has been made of the frivolous tendency of the times. Duty calls a halt. Duty is on guard and we pass her challenge at our peril. Duty reminds us that the asp which is fabled to have poisoned Cleopatra was brought to her in a basket of flowers. So nearly all the reptiles that sting us to death steal upon us hidden in bright colors and the perfumes of pleasure. Duty makes no protest against flowers and perfume. Duty applauds the beauty and fragrance of the world [illegible] like this. Still it warns us to beware that venomous serpents are wont to mask themselves in just such beauty. Sirens used to sing enchantingly on classic shores and charm luckless voyagers to land where they were slain by cruel giants. It does not do to yield to sweet strains till we know about them. When Ulysses sailed by he had his sailors' ears filled with wax and himself lashed to the mast in order to escape their charms. A little and a good deal of that unequivocal spirit of resolve to resist the witchery of winning temptations is duty's admonition. It is time now to shout the truth and clinch the fist with determination to withstand many honeyed solicitations to evil—to sail doggedly by on the proud and blessed voyage of duty.

Ellen Sturgis Hooper writes ten thousand biographies in one where she says:

I slept and dreamed that life was beauty;
I woke and found that life was duty.

So Solomon the wise found it, and Dickens and Thackeray and millions more, only so many of them found it out too late.

2. The second point in mind is designed to enlarge and ennoble our idea of duty by suggesting its relation to law. For convenience sake we use law—like many other words—in several senses. In the present sense of the word I insist upon wholly divesting it of every syllable of law as applied to methods and processes in nature. We are to think now of law as prescribing and regulating intelligent voluntary conduct. And in this sense I desire to affirm that duty is the sole adequate ground of all rightful constitutional, enacted and common law in the world. If there be no duty then all civil law is usurpation and has no right to be. Law is enacted and enforced on the grounded presumption of duty, and without duty there is not a valid law in any constitution, or statute book, or code in existence. And beyond this if there is not duty, there is no right and wrong. Moral distinctions fail. Evil is good—good is evil. Things and actions and persons are all alike. We act the fool when we blame or praise. And just this confounding of good and evil has been going on, and is sweeping onward now with floodlike violence because we have been increasingly false to duty. And in this line of thinking I am bringing you to a position where we can stand and touch the most appalling themes of time and destiny. Treachery and treason to duty are what make the coming judgment and perdition of ungodly men appear vague or improbable. In heroic eras when moral earnestness exalts and enthrones duty, men do not doubt or question the fearful visitation of retribution upon sin, and sinning and sinners. If there is duty then there is right and wrong, and the difference between them is utterly infinite, and the gulf between is bridgeless and absolutely impassable in the nature of things which Almighty God could not change if he would.

This effeminate estimate of duty is struggling hard to wipe out the distinction between loyalty and disloyalty. Twenty years ago the mills of the avenging gods were grinding and crushing us between the upper and nether millstones of war on this question. But to-day a mock charity goes abroad sneering at duty, telling it on every hand that after all it was only a trifling misunderstanding, that there was little or no difference, that one side was neither better nor worse than the other. Where are we on these rapids of moral chaos when such a horrible heresy calls itself truth, and smiles brazenly in the face of a million men slain and millions of treasure poured out for loyalty! Away with such charity, or calamity tenfold worse than war will scourge us to the very verge of ruin. We have peace in this country or any other upon the basis of common loyalty to righteous government and not otherwise.

It is not what anybody thinks to be right that is right. That only is right which is right independently of any man's thinking. It is our imperative business to find out what the right is, and the surest way is to do duty. As George Eliot says in Daniel Deronda: "The reward of one duty is the power to fulfill another." Faithfulness to duty is the path that thus grows brighter and brighter unto the perfect sunrise of God's eternal day of reward.

CLOSING REMARKS TO THE GRADUATES.

In the heat of this great theme I gladly address some words directly to the members of our present graduating class.

1. It is fitting that I call your attention to those remarkable words in which Christ upbraided the unbelieving cities of his time, warning them that it should be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon and Sodom than for them because they sinned against [illegible] education [illegible]

2. But you have a [illegible] happiness, health [illegible] ed desire. But [illegible] happiness and beauty [illegible] duty. Beauty found [illegible] turn into nameless [illegible] stroying fiend in the [illegible]

3. The tide of duty flows in [illegible] attraction from beyond [illegible] Carlyle said that from Paris [illegible] visible, and, therefore, [illegible] with all the horrors of wild [illegible] Bancroft said of the Pilgrims [illegible] feet trod the wilderness [illegible] hearts in the skies; and, therefore, [illegible] tread the wilderness [illegible] fruitage of pure church, free state [illegible] rights inalienable. May [illegible] your hearts constantly [illegible] attractions to duty.

4. The lesson of duty is the [illegible] ble to you. All your learning [illegible] to learn the lesson of your [illegible]

5. In learning this supreme lesson [illegible] is to have powerful play. To this date [illegible] had been received [illegible] lbs valley [illegible] eastern a total of [illegible] will exceed that of last somew[illegible] more willingness to sell and th[illegible] ment is certainly a free one [illegible] to sell there has been [illegible] commission agents very [illegible] conviction that [illegible] one to sell [illegible] This last [illegible] been no [illegible] paid full prices [illegible] 18 cents [illegible] petition has [illegible] benefit of sellers [illegible] movement and free [illegible] prices so far [illegible] liberally soon [illegible] relatively less [illegible] field and the market [illegible] for a time [illegible] eastern shipment will [illegible] continue liberal [illegible] same steady [illegible] bringing 12@[illegible] 17½@18c for extra [illegible] bringing [illegible] has so far [illegible] market is light [illegible] same range as for Eastern Oregon [illegible] Umpquas are nominally [illegible]

The New York Shipping List [illegible] says: The season is sufficiently [illegible] warrant the assertion that the [illegible] equal, if it does not exceed the [illegible] years and the steady decrease [illegible] foreign clothing wool is consider[illegible] that consumers are depending m[illegible] the domestic product. The [illegible] ly improved [illegible] that growers are [illegible] erating the breeds of sheep. Th[illegible] why the high standards [illegible] in Australia should not be [illegible] but such results [illegible] care, attention and study. Grow[illegible] nize the importance of stead[illegible] direction [illegible] their foreign competitors [illegible] hating centers during the past [illegible] rather slow and unsatisfactory [illegible] of a rather liberal [illegible] wool in Boston. [illegible] continue to prevail [illegible] been made [illegible] eastern [illegible] but there is nothing in the fu[illegible] the belief that there will be [illegible] the general condition of affairs [illegible]

The Boston Shipping List of th[illegible] The tone of the market is dull [illegible] domestic wool sold has been con[illegible] considerable of which is new [illegible] foot up a fair average on account [illegible] Cordova wool taken by carpet ma[illegible] stock of old wool is considerably [illegible] assortment offering is light, but [illegible] wool are near at hand. Manufa[illegible] do not appear to be in any pressi[illegible] this market is concerned and if [illegible] under the clips in the interior [illegible] cause they sinned against greater light. Your education augments your duty.

2. But you have a natural desire for pleasure, happiness, beauty. Right. It is a God-implanted desire. But be sure you find your pleasure, happiness and beauty by the patient path of duty. Beauty found in violation of duty will turn into nameless shapes of ugliness and a destroying fiend in the end.

3. The tide of duty flows in answer to divine attraction from beyond moon and sun and stars. Carlyle said that from Paris eternity was not visible and, therefore, violence filled the city with all the horrors of wild and raging passions. Bancroft said of the Pilgrims, that while their feet trod the wilderness, they carried their hearts in the skies, and, therefore, under their tread the wilderness burst into the bloom and fruitage of pure church, free state and human rights inalienable. May I charge you to carry your hearts constantly within these high divine attractions to duty.

4. The lesson of duty is the best lesson possible to you. All your learning is vain if you fail to learn the lesson of your personal duty.

5. In learning this supreme lesson conscience is to have powerful play. But (if I may bring up here some of your class-room instruction) conscience is no magician to inform us of duty without effort. People so often think that because conscience does not tell them that a thing is wrong, it is therefore right. Laziness originates that sort of a conscience. Many people debate as to how conscience is a guide. I do not hesitate to say that conscience is not a guide. Are we then lost and without a guide to duty in this wilderness? By no means. But our guide in duty, as in everything else, is our rational intelligence. Conscience does three things. First, it tells us to find out duty; second, to do duty; and third, it approves and applauds the duty done. Lazy people like to make conscience out a guide, for then they will have little to do. But in learning the lesson of your duty your rational intelligence is your guide, which your conscience commands you to put to diligent use. Obey conscience in the use of your intelligence to find out duty and you will find it; then obey conscience in doing it. Duty and conscience will flood your lives with the pleasures of approval unspeakably transcending any and all the fleeting pleasures gotten through disloyalty to duty.

WILLAMETTE UNIVERSITY

Proceedings at the Forty-first Anniversary—List of the Graduates, etc.

SALEM, June 10.

Tuesday from 8 to 12 A. M. was given to the examination of classes in various lines of study. In all cases the students did themselves and their teachers credit, and the numerous visitors seemed to be highly pleased with what they heard and saw.

POLITICAL EXPRESSION.

[illegible] The democrats may be able to [illegible] more skillfully than the republicans [illegible] before 1888 they will [illegible], because a source of weakness.

[illegible] Mayor Harrison of Chicago [illegible] the gamblers who [illegible] Chicago, Mayor Harrison's [illegible] "square" gambling was [illegible] Has he been [illegible].

[illegible] There are some signs of a [illegible] in Virginia. If it [illegible] equal degree to [illegible] as a politician and [illegible] of his Bourbon [illegible].

[illegible] We don't hear [illegible] enormous surplus in [illegible] money is there, [illegible] a cute way of book[illegible] reports no longer [illegible].

[illegible] Cleveland has recognized [illegible] services in his [illegible] by appointing his [illegible] at Port Townsend [illegible] man will get for [illegible] Cleveland [illegible].

[illegible] president has at all [illegible] the reflection [illegible] without the democrats [illegible] enough to convince [illegible]. The independent [illegible] but there are [illegible] follow them to [illegible].

[illegible] Our fondest hopes are oft destroyed, [illegible] all our plight [illegible] don't avoid [illegible] don't set right [illegible] in wo [illegible] doing.

COMMERCIAL.

WEDNESDAY, June 10.

Weather cloudy with light showers [illegible]. More or less rain fell last night at [illegible], Huntington, Grant's and Celilo, and this [illegible] at The Dalles. [illegible] the mill at Glyndon, M[illegible], is grinding [illegible] wheat in lieu of hard spring wheat, which [illegible] to be scarce in that locality to test [illegible] for a "straight" flour. While the flour is [illegible] pronounced a good bread making article [illegible] the local paper, no westward [illegible].

EXPORTS—Per str Columbia for San Francisco [illegible] sks oats, 1,040 sks barley, [illegible] 52,456 lbs wool, 100 lbs [illegible] cashmeres, 30 bls calfskins [illegible], 6 bls deerskins [illegible] butter, 10 cs [illegible] cans tallow [illegible], 1 bbl butter, 15 hf [illegible] sale, 80 tons pig iron [illegible] old rails, 2,200 ft lumber, 1,500 [illegible] treasure.

FREIGHTS—The ship Mount Washington [illegible] loads wheat to San Francisco [illegible] CF Church. The cargo [illegible] Walla Walla, of which there has been a steady [illegible] here. There is talk of [illegible] next season [illegible].

WHEAT—English markets weak [illegible] New York and Chicago are [illegible] today, the former [illegible], the latter declining. San Francisco [illegible]. Our own market rules very [illegible] are nominal.

The aggregate supply of wheat in sight in the United States (exclusive of California and Oregon) and Canada June 6 was 3[illegible] bushels [illegible] bushels against [illegible] on the preceding [illegible] weekly exhibit an aggregate of 3[illegible] bushels [illegible], and 5,022,200 bushels corn, and a year ago an aggregate of 16,782,700 bushels wheat and [illegible] bushels corn.

FLOUR—The Columbia carried [illegible] mostly Walla Walla. The market [illegible] change.

OATS—Large shipments by [illegible] with as much more offering for the next [illegible] dealers paid 35c to-day for choice feed. There is some request for shipment but the bulk of [illegible] is in the interior.

FRUITS, ETC.—Cold weather slightly [illegible] the movement, but most sorts enjoy a good [illegible] for eating. Best cherries brought [illegible] strawberries slow at [illegible] currants about [illegible] and raspberries the same.

PROVISIONS—Very little change from last week. The request continues light and [illegible] line of liberal stocks lends a weaker tone to the market. Bacon shows new weakness [illegible] the line the depression is marked. [illegible] sell very slowly and low prices are keeping [illegible] Eastern at present. We quote jobbing prices: [illegible] cured hams 10@11c, do bacon 9c [illegible] country cured generally [illegible] Eastern hams 12@13c, do bacon 9@10c. Lard in free [illegible] and common rules weak; quote Eastern [illegible] 10@10½c, local choice tins 10@10½c [illegible] packages 8c.

DRIED FRUIT—Stocks of [illegible] market is limited, the [illegible] selling a little [illegible] always upheld. In a small way [illegible] better than San Francisco as Oregon machine [illegible] apples are quoted [illegible] in boxes. Quote jobbing values [illegible] parcels: Sun-dried apples and pears 4@6c [illegible] do 6@8c, prunes 8@10c, plums 8@10c, peaches 12½@13c, raisins $2@2 25 per [illegible] box [illegible] or common machine plums sell cheaper.

CHICKENS—Market less weak and choice are [illegible]. Choice old $3 50@4, young $2@3.

EGGS—Steady at 14c.

HIDES, SKINS, ETC.—Fair movement, but the market is very quiet. Dry hides in New York are lower. Tallow quoted 5c for [illegible]. Quote wet salted hides 5½@6c, dry salted 15@16c. Furs and skins quoted: [illegible] beaver $1 37½@1 75, valley summer [illegible] 20@25c, valley winter 15@20c, Eastern Oregon summer deerskins 15@20c, do winter [illegible], elkskins 8c per lb. The following sell by the skin: Black bear $1@[illegible], brown do 50c@$[illegible], [illegible] pale do 50c@$1, silver fox $5@[illegible], red do 75c@$1 50, lynx 37½@50c, [illegible] marten 25@75c, dark mink 10@40c, land [illegible] $1 50, wolf 37½@50c, wolverine 50c@1 50.

HOPS—Of the week's receipts all but [illegible] for New York account. The market is [illegible], 5@8c nominally quoted. New York [illegible] continued dullness without urgent pressure to sell.

WOOL—Receipts for the week 1,091,6[illegible] lbs, including 137,222 lbs valley, against 1,080,783 lbs last week, and 537,021 lbs for the week ending June 10 last year. Last season's total receipts—March to [illegible]—were 1,929,710 lbs valley and [illegible] lbs [illegible], a total of 8,441,813 lbs from all sources. From March 1 to date this year [illegible] lbs valley and [illegible] lbs Eastern [illegible] lbs or within 3,311 [illegible] lbs of the receipt [illegible] last year's clip. To this date last year there had been received 81,033 lbs valley and [illegible] lbs Eastern, a total of 3,319,891 lbs. The clip this year will exceed that of last somewhat, but there is [illegible] willingness to sell, and this year's movement is certainly a free one. Added to this desire [illegible] there has been earnest work on the part of [illegible] commission agents, very free buying and a settled conviction that an early market would be a good one to sell in, aside from any selling pressure. The last cause is a free movement [illegible] been no mistake for [illegible] and paid full prices [illegible] commanding [illegible]. In the eastern [illegible] some [illegible] been indulged [illegible] to the [illegible] of sellers. The [illegible] and free [illegible] the best prices so far paid. One California [illegible] hold [illegible] soon filling his wants. Others [illegible] relatively less but are now [illegible] possession of the [illegible] and the market will [illegible] for a time. Grading houses are busy baling for Eastern shipment while exports to San Francisco [illegible] liberal. Prices [illegible] about the [illegible] steady range as lately noted. Eastern Oregon bringing 12@17c for ordinary to choice grades and [illegible] for extra choice to fancy [illegible] bringing the extreme. The movement in valley has so far largely for shipment and the local market is in light trading. Prices show about the same range as for Eastern Oregon, although some [illegible] are nominally quoted at higher.

The New York Shipping List of the [illegible] inst. says: The season is sufficiently far advanced to warrant the assertion that the supply will fully equal, if it does not exceed the clip of previous years, and the steady decrease in imports of [illegible] clothing wool is considered an indication that consumers are depending more and more upon the domestic product. The quality has [illegible] improved although complaints are still frequent that growers are negligent in the matter of [illegible] the breeds of sheep. There is no reason why the high standards obtained by wool [illegible] in Australia should not be reached in this country, but such results can not be realized without great care, attention and study. Growers should be [illegible] the importance of steady advancement in the direction pointed out and endeavor to surpass their foreign competitors. Business at all distributing centers during the past few days has been rather slow and unsatisfactory with the exception of a rather liberal movement of Cordova carpet wool in Boston. At primary sources high prices continue to prevail and moderate purchases have been made for eastern account at ruling figures, but there is nothing in the future to look to justify the belief that there will be much improvement in the general condition of affairs.

The Boston Shipping List of the [illegible] inst. says: The tone of the market is dull. The amount of domestic wool sold has been comparatively light [illegible] considerable of which is new Texas, but the sales [illegible] up a fair average on account of a large line of [illegible] wool taken by carpet manufacturers. The stock of old wool is considerably reduced and the present offering is light, but supplies of new [illegible] near at hand. Manufacturers, however, [illegible] to be in any pressing want so far as [illegible] is concerned, and if they are compe[illegible] the clip in the interior at comparatively higher prices than on the seaboard there is nothing in the condition of the trade that would warrant it. It appears to us that for some months to come we shall have a dull, dragging market. The sales of the week include 11,000 [illegible] at [illegible].

The Merchandise Market.

[illegible] movement in this [illegible] general trade this week [illegible] new money which went to pay [illegible] considered. Jobbers have [illegible] orders and receiving [illegible] reports. All [illegible] while for the present [illegible] supplying a fair amount of money [illegible]. The indicated demand [illegible] is larger [illegible] the shipping [illegible] apprehension of [illegible] are not [illegible]. This month [illegible] work and [illegible] has been [illegible] a possibility of [illegible]. The run at present is described as [illegible] to that of last year. Vessels [illegible] slow dispatch and the [illegible] this month [illegible] expectation is free.

Of last week's San Francisco market the Commercial News says: A marked decline [illegible] American coffee has been the leading feature [illegible] the week [illegible] receipts have been [illegible] an accumulation of stock [illegible] to supplying the home demand [illegible] Central American to the past [illegible] bags [illegible] this [illegible] New York [illegible] bags [illegible] New York [illegible] out of range [illegible] the [illegible] are not yet out [illegible] to 6 per [illegible] and [illegible] in demand for new. Syrups are steady. [illegible] is scarce and in request [illegible]. Some [illegible]. The spice market [illegible] pepper [illegible] small lot received per last steamer sold [illegible] Mixed China [illegible] unchanged [illegible] prices [illegible] of importers [illegible] the market is firm [illegible] without [illegible] tendency. Sales of [illegible] bags are reported at [illegible] cash. Late advices from the islands report [illegible] in the [illegible] districts, which will probably [illegible] forwarding the crop to market. Domestic [illegible] is steady with a fair [illegible] of Hawaiian [illegible] for spot [illegible] while lots to arrive are offered at [illegible].

This dried [illegible] slightly under [illegible] and [illegible] in prices of [illegible] goods, with a steady [illegible] increasing demand [illegible] freight [illegible] trade. The pack [illegible] so far [illegible] will fall far [illegible] that of last year. [illegible] the Sacramento river [illegible] [illegible] Old [illegible] New [illegible] steady. Old stocks of [illegible] fruits [illegible] broken and pretty well cleaned up. Local canners are now picking apricots, cherries and currants. There is considerable inquiry for new fruit for future delivery, but prices are not fully settled, the tendency being toward a general lowering of rates. Nails quoted from [illegible] factory [illegible] per keg for [illegible] to 60d, with 10 cents per keg discount for [illegible] kegs.

THE [illegible] MARKET.

BEANS—[illegible] steady.

BREAD, ETC.—[illegible] ship [illegible] others [illegible] 14c.

COAL OIL—[illegible] fair.

COFFEE—[illegible] San Francisco [illegible] Costa Rica [illegible] Salvador and Guatemala [illegible] best [illegible] 20.

CANNED GOODS—[illegible] steady but [illegible] new pack of fruits promises to [illegible] in some directions. Stocks are only fair [illegible]. Quote jobbing prices: Corn $1 [illegible]@1 50, tomatoes 2½s, 90c, gallons, $2 [illegible], peaches $1 [illegible], table peaches $1 50, assorted pie fruits [illegible], $1 50, gallons $4 [illegible].

PICKLES—Quote kegs [illegible] $1 40, [illegible] $1 [illegible].

RICE—[illegible] went up with a bound, two changes being made here in as many days. The price now is relatively higher than San Francisco, but stocks are light and the Islands are sending away less. China shows no change. Arrivals by way of San Francisco have been free and direct cargoes are due. We quote Island $[illegible], mixed China $4 [illegible]@[illegible] 85.

SALT—Selling [illegible] steady. Stocks are not large and almost wholly in the hands of retailers. There is a good request for stock salt. Fine Liverpool selling at $1[illegible]@$18 and $[illegible] and half ground coast $1[illegible] 06 to [illegible] as to size of containers.

SUGARS—Demand good. The threatened [illegible] has not caused heavy stocking by our dealers. Coast prices are claimed to be [illegible] less than New York, fined can be laid down for [illegible]. We quote barrels: Extra C 6c, golden C [illegible]c, D [illegible]c, cube, crushed fine do, and powdered 7½c, dry granulated 7c.

CHEESE—Offerings liberal and market easy at 12@14c for best local.

BAGS, ETC.—It is stated that supplies now on this coast and en route are double the prospective requirements. The import cost of those held is 5c or more, and importers are not inclined to cut prices, last San Francisco sales netting a loss. Evidently there is no future for the market. Quote wheat bags [illegible]c, wool do 38@40c, sewing twine 5[illegible].

THE MEAT MARKET.

Quotations are prices paid to dealers by slaughterers for whole carcasses or on foot.

BEEF—Best conditioned 3[illegible]c gross and free supplies are on the way.

MUTTON—Quoted 2½@2¾c; request fair but market is only steady.

VEAL—Good conditioned 8c.

LAMBS—Best bring 9[illegible].

HOGS—Spring [illegible] 4@4½ [illegible] dressed [illegible].

ASSOCIATED PRESS MARKETS.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

NEW YORK, June 10.—Governments have been strong on limited business with sales of [illegible] 103½. In stocks there was not a single new feature of interest to-day. Prices were strong with slight reactions until about 1 o'clock, when the highest quotations of the day were generally reached in comparatively active stocks, gains amounting to ¼@1 per cent, with an advance in the price of Lackawanna of 1½ per cent. In the next hour there was a moderate reaction during which about one half of the previous gains were lost. Between [illegible] and 3 o'clock extreme dullness was the feature, the most prominent [illegible] remaining until the close with fluctuations of [illegible] per cent. Closing quotations however [illegible] heavy [illegible] of the [illegible]. The [illegible] of 10 shares Oregon [illegible] at [illegible] [illegible] decline. Union Pacific was prominent for its weakness in the afternoon declining ¾ per cent from the highest quotations reached and closing unchanged as compared with last evening [illegible].

MONEY, BONDS AND STOCKS.

MUNICIPAL NOMINEES.

Candidates of the Republican Party for City Offices

For Mayor John Gates For Councilmen First Ward Henry McCraken Second Ward S. Farrell Third Ward Frank Hacheney

The republican city convention to nominate candidates for mayor and councilmen to be voted for next Monday, met at 10 o'clock yesterday forenoon in the police court rooms. The meeting was marked by the greatest harmony and business was transacted quietly and quickly. The place was packed, and the hallway outside was impassable for the crowd who pressed close in the vain hope of seeing and hearing what was going on inside.

When the meeting was called to order M. F. Mulkey was chosen temporary chairman, and Edward Holman secretary.

A motion was made and carried that the chairman appoint a committee of three on credentials. The chairman appointed as such committee A. A. Seagraves, William H. Andrus and William Fliedner.

The convention then took a fifteen minutes recess to enable the committee on credentials to prepare a report.

On the reassembling of the convention the committee presented the following report:

To the Republican City Convention: We, the undersigned, your committee on credentials, respectfully beg leave to report that we find the following named gentlemen entitled to seats in this convention:

First ward—J. McCraken, Richard Seeley, William Munger, W. T. Everson, A. A. Seagraves, D. C. Ireland by George H. Durham proxy, C. C. Phillips, C. W. Parker by I. E. Vaughn proxy, A. P. DeLin.

Second ward—William Dunbar, R. H. Schwab, C. F. Geiger, Edward Croft, William Friedlander, W. H. Andrus, L. S. Hawkins, I. I. Wright by W. S. Chapman proxy, Edward H. Inman.

Third ward—J. A. Strowbridge, J. [illegible], Angus Campbell, M. F. Mulkey, J. C. [illegible], George Gardiner, H. W. Monastes, S. S. White, A. Post, J. D. [illegible], William Fliedner.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

A. A. SEAGRAVES,
WM. H. ANDRUS,
WM. FLIEDNER,
Committee on Credentials.

Upon motion of Geo. H. Durham, the report of the committee on credentials was adopted.

Mr. Mulkey and Mr. Holman having ably filled the temporary posts of president and secretary, they were unanimously declared the permanent officers of the convention.

Mr. Durham moved that in the absence of any regular order of business, the convention proceed at once to the nomination of a mayor. This was unanimously agreed to.

I. A. Post and Dr. C. L. Geiger were appointed to act as tellers.

Geo. H. Durham placed in nomination for mayor William H. Adams. No other nomination was made.

A. A. Seagraves moved that the nomination of Mr. Adams be made unanimous, as there was no other candidate in the field; carried.

On motion a committee of three was appointed to wait on Mr. Adams and inform him of his nomination. The chair appointed J. A. Strowbridge, W. H. Andrus and A. P. DeLin to act in that capacity.

Mr. Adams soon after made his appearance escorted by the committee. His appearance was the signal for very enthusiastic applause.

To the surprise of nearly all the spectators, as well as of many of the delegates, who had not been informed of what was to occur, Mr. Adams did not accept the nomination. On the contrary, he declined it, gracefully but earnestly. In a few well chosen words he told the convention that while keenly sensible of the honor implied by the nomination, he felt that the harmony of the republican party would be better assured by his withdrawal. He said he wished above all to see his party victorious, and that private and personal ambition should always be made subservient to the good of the majority. He desired the convention to accept his declination, and to place in nomination for mayor some good, honorable and competent citizen, and that he felt certain that the party would triumphantly elect him next Monday. He felt that his own nomination was a most gratifying expression of the confidence of the convention in his personal worth and integrity. His friends he thanked for their earnest support and hoped they would accept his unconditional withdrawal from the field. As he closed his brief remarks he was greeted with loud and long continued applause.

Upon motion of Mr. Everson, Mr. Adams's declination was accepted.

Mr. Durham moved that the convention proceed to take an informal ballot for mayor; carried.

The name of Mr. John Gates was placed in nomination. On the mention of his name the delegates and many of the spectators loudly applauded.

Mr. Chapman then moved that Mr. Gates be nominated by acclamation. This motion prevailed amid great enthusiasm.

Mr. Gates was then announced by the chairman the unanimous choice of the convention for mayor, which was the signal for renewed applause.

It was moved and carried that a committee of three be appointed to wait on Mr. Gates and inform him of the action of the convention, and to ascertain if he would accept. The chairman appointed as such committee Colonel John McCraken, Wm. Fliedner and George H. Durham.

It being suggested that the convention proceed at once to the nomination of councilmen a short recess was taken to enable the ward delegations to retire and make nominations.

The arrival of the nominee for the mayoralty, Mr. Gates, was the signal for the convention to reassemble. Colonel McCraken introduced the candidate, who was greeted with such applause as must have been to him a gratifying token of his popularity. As soon as he could be heard Mr. Gates stepped forward and said:

Gentlemen of the Convention—This is a surprise to me. My name has been used in connection with that of councilman from my ward, but I was not prepared for such an honor as the nomination for mayor. Allow me to most heartily thank you for this expression of your confidence in me. I will accept the nomination, and if elected will serve the city to the very best of my ability. This is all any one can promise.

These remarks were received with tremendous applause, that lasted a minute or more.

Mr. Adams was now called for and came forward. He said he most cordially [illegible] and [illegible] the nomination of Mr. Gates; that the convention had made an excellent selection. He predicted the election of Mr. Gates by a majority of 500 [illegible] 1000 votes. He concluded by saying he should go to work and labor as hard to secure the election of the nominee as if he himself headed the [illegible]. His remarks were received with enthusiastic applause.

Mr. George H. Durham then addressed the convention briefly, awarding praise to Mr. Adams, who had [illegible] the fulfillment of an honorable [illegible] and [illegible] the party upon the final selection which its delegates had made.

The delegations from the several wards then reported they were ready to present their nominations. The delegates from the First ward presented the name of Henry McCraken as nominee for councilman, the Second ward delegation that of S. Farrell, and the Third that of Frank Hacheney. As each of these names was presented the convention unanimously ratified the nomination.

W. S. Chapman moved that the chairman appoint three persons who shall constitute the republican city central committee; carried.

Mr. Mulkey then announced the following names: W. T. Everson from the First ward, Wm. Fliedner from the Second ward, and W. H. Andrus from the Third, to constitute such committee.

[illegible]

Less than an hour was occupied with the foregoing proceedings and every one seemed to feel that an honest, open course had been followed out and had resulted in the selection of men whom every republican in the city could conscientiously support and for whom many democrats would cast their votes. Talk of this character was heard on every side after the convention had adjourned and no whisper of opposition could be found mingling with it.

John Gates, the nominee for mayor, is well known in this city as well as over the northwest coast. He came here from Worcester, Mass., in 1860. He entered the service of the [illegible] Company as an engineer on one of its boats, was promoted to the position of assistant, and finally became chief engineer of the river division of the O. R. & N. Company, which position he now holds. His character is that of a reliable, safe and unpretentious man and he has frequently shown himself to be a friend of the laboring classes.

THE STAGE

JANAUSCHEK AND HER NEW PLAY.—Next Tuesday evening the great Janauschek opens at the New Market for five nights. The repertoire for the week is: Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and Saturday matinee, "My Life;" Thursday, "Zillah;" Friday, "Marie Stuart;" Saturday, "Macbeth." Of Madame Janauschek and her new play the [illegible] of April [illegible] says: One of the world's truly great actresses is Madame Janauschek, and although she is not as young and spirited as she was when she first honored the American stage with her presence she is still the true representative of the heroic in the drama, still the great artiste whose methods are models and whose strength, fire and resource are scarcely paralleled. In all our knowledge of the stage we never knew an actress who combined in her own proper person such an infinite variety of dramatic qualities as the artist of whom we write. With a power and emotional force greater than Ristori ever exhibited, a nervous and fiery intensity equal to Rachel and a skill for elaboration and finish only equaled by Bernhardt, she has always been to us a marvel even among the great histrionic names with which alone she could with propriety be associated. The dramatic tendencies of these plays are not in harmony with such fine work as that of Janauschek, the classical drama is at a discount and Madame Janauschek, like others eminent in the profession, has had to meet the demands of the times as best she could. Her appearance in Harry Meredith's play, "My Life," is a concession to modern taste. It was really intended to give Janauschek an opportunity for a display of her varied talents, and it answered its purpose. Madame Janauschek as Mico or Leben and Circe Encore are entirely dissimilar. The first is an old blind woman who with the sudden loss of her sight has suffered also the deprivation of her power to recall certain momentous events in her life, and Circe is a gay, worldly, dissipated and reckless French opera-singer of uncertain age and to the characteristics of each Madame Janauschek gives a striking individuality without infringing on the bounds of nature or straining the rules of true dramatic art. The part of Leben she invests with much dignity and pathos, while in the role of Circe she exhibits in a strong light the very opposite qualities of frivolity and lack of feminine tenderness. The transition from one to the other of these characters is effected with a skill in which Janauschek is supreme, and in the last act especially, with remarkable facility. The costumes worn by Madame Janauschek as Circe are exceedingly elaborate and picturesque, and add not a little to the effect of her portrayal. Among the support are Messrs. Geo. D. Chaplin and A. H. Stuart, who were with Janauschek two years ago, and both capital actors.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.—Following Madame Janauschek and opening Monday, June 22, comes the "Mountain Pink" combination, with Laura E. Dainty as the star. It is a play in the M[illegible] order, but somewhat lighter. On Monday, June 29, "The Shadows of a Great City" by the Baldwin theater company and with the Baldwin scenery. It is the best of modern melodramas, and had a better run in San Francisco than the "Lights o' London." Among the company are Lewis Morrison, George Osburn and L. R. Stockwell.

New York Tribune: How dishonest is the cant which rolls its eyes and deplores the ruin of the American carrying trade, and never loses a chance to malign, injure and insult the one shipbuilder who has made a courageous, manly and persevering fight in behalf of American shipbuilding!

H. C. Hill was the only nominee and he was declared elected by acclamation.

FOR ASSESSOR.

S. Bullock, H. Breithaupt and John Shaver. After a second ballot had been taken without nomination Mr. Shaver withdrew and on the third ballot Mr. Bullock was elected, receiving 13 votes.

FOR COUNCILMEN.

The delegations from the various wards made the following nominations:

First Ward—J. K. Laing.
Second Ward—Ross Merrick.
Third Ward—A. B. Bloomer.
Fourth Ward—E. J. Sprague.

The convention, by a unanimous vote, ratified the nominations.

CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

The chair appointed the following city central committee: M. T. Cunningham, first ward; J. M. Stott, second ward; F. S. Dunning, third ward; G. A. Stanton, fourth ward.

After a neat speech by Dr. Joseph, thanking the convention for the honor conferred upon him, the meeting adjourned.

DEMOCRATIC MASS MEETING.

About 200 citizens assembled at Neppel's hall last evening in response to a call issued by the democratic central committee for the nomination of city officers. Mr. Turnbull, chairman of the committee, called the meeting to order and the following permanent officers were elected: Chairman, W. T. Burney; secretary, R. I. Gillespie.

The chair appointed the following committee on order of business: First ward, Louis N[illegible], W. H. Meade; second ward, F. J. Sperry, F. Nottage; third ward, W. C. Everest, James Lyons; fourth ward, A. McAyel, J. L. Shute.

While the committee was preparing their report, Mr. Cornelius Taylor, upon invitation, addressed the meeting, and made an eloquent appeal to citizens to do their duty at the coming election.

The committee reported the following order of business, which was adopted:

1 Nomination of Recorder
2 Nomination of Treasurer
3 Nomination of Marshal
4 Nomination of Assessor
5 Nomination of Mayor
6 Recess of ten minutes
Nomination of Councilmen

FOR RECORDER.

R. I. Gillespie was nominated, and there being no other nominations, he was elected by acclamation.

TREASURER.

Arthur Kindorf and W. B. Welch were nominated. W. H. Merrick and H. D. McGuire were appointed tellers, and a ballot was taken with the following result: Welch 104, Kindorf 8[illegible]. The former was declared the choice of the meeting.

FOR MARSHAL.

The following nominations were made: Geo. Linville, G. R. Matthews, L. C. Gibson, John J. Murphy, Sam Stafford and Al Kadderly. The first ballot resulted—Linville, 60; Al Kadderly, 52; Gibson, 25; Murphy, 26; Stafford, 14; Matthews, 4.

All candidates withdrew except Linville and Kadderly, and H. P. McGuire moved that Linville be declared the unanimous choice of the meeting. The motion was lost, and on motion a second ballot was taken, which resulted as follows: Linville, 77; Kadderly, 108. Al. Kadderly was declared [illegible].

FOR ASSESSOR.

[illegible] H. W. [illegible] West [illegible].

[illegible]

FOR COUNCILMEN.

[illegible] as follows:

First ward—No nomination.
Second ward—J. A. Newell.
Third ward—W. C. E[illegible].
Fourth ward—A. McAyel.

[illegible] were unanimously [illegible].

CITY CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

Upon motion the chair appointed the following city central committee: First ward, A. H. [illegible]; Second ward, C. [illegible]; Third ward, [illegible]; Fourth ward, M. J. [illegible].

Upon motion, the nature of the next meeting for the nomination of city officers was left to the discretion of the committee. Adjourned.

IMMIGRATION ITEMS

[illegible] Oregon [illegible] newly arrived.

[illegible] been added to the literature of the state board.

Almost every county in the state promises a [illegible] display of grain, fruit and [illegible] specimens this season.

Immigrants from the Sound [illegible] to visit the state [illegible]. Those who [illegible] come back greatly disappointed [illegible] prospects [illegible].

Dr. [illegible] of Roseburg has sent to the state board of immigration [illegible] from mines in Douglas county. The specimens are attracting a good deal of attention [illegible].

The secretary of the state board of immigration has received an official communication from W. T. Whitlock, county clerk of Clackamas, announcing the appointment of H. [illegible] Cross as immigration agent for that county. The appointment was duly made [illegible] the request of a large number of prominent citizens of that county. All immigrants for Clackamas will be sent to Mr. Cross for information and location.

At a meeting of Polk county citizens held a few days ago at Independence the organization of a county immigration board was effected. J. K. Kirkland of Independence is president, W. P. Connaway of Independence is secretary and W. M. Ellis of Dallas, corresponding secretary. The board appointed sub-agents in each precinct to compile statistics, farm lists and to collect specimen products for exhibition at state board. Mr. Connaway is instructed to prepare a descriptive pamphlet of Polk county for use of immigrants.

Among the specimens received at the state board of immigration yesterday, R. G. Scroggs, Jr., of Roseburg, sends seven very handsome specimens of Douglas county woods—oak, maple, yellow fir, red cedar, sugar pine, white cedar and mountain mahogany. The latter is a magnificent wood, very close grain, heavy, and throws off a spice-like perfume, that is so strong and pungent as to be noticed even in the large rooms of the board. Mr. Scroggs adds a fine specimen of coal from the Mt. Scott precinct, Douglas county.

SALEM NOTES

SALEM, June 10.

Mrs. George Sewell of Portland is the guest of Mrs. R. P. Earhart.

Rev. R. W. Caswell, pastor of Grace M. E. church of Portland, was in the city Tuesday.

The governor has appointed the following notaries public: W. S. Chaleston and C. L. [illegible] of Portland.

In the absence of the firemen at Astoria special precautions are being taken to guard against fire getting a start here.

There has been no business done in the office of the secretary of state this week, both Messrs. Earhart and Hodgkin being absent. His office is undergoing a thorough overhauling and renovating in the interim.

About 100 of Salem's young men and some 20 young ladies are at Astoria attending the firemen's tournament. The Home Amusement band accompanied them, and Salem is correspondingly quiet during this week.

A great many gentlemen of the tramp class are to be seen passing through Salem, some going north and some south everyday. The police are keeping them from committing any great depredations by their watchfulness only.

Rev. George W. Chandler, pastor of Taylor street church of Portland, and wife, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Hughes last Sunday. Mr. Chandler preached the commencement sermon on Sunday at the First M. E. church.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction E. B. McElroy returned via Portland from a short visit to Corvallis and other west side towns yesterday. He is working in the interest of the State Teachers Association, which will be held at Astoria July [illegible] to 9th.

Mr. Louis Kuhn, manager of Goldsmith & Loewenberg's foundry at the penitentiary, was married in San Francisco on Monday afternoon to Miss Mansfield of that city. Mr. Kuhn has a host of friends in Portland and this city, who will join in congratulations.

THE HOSE BOYS.

[illegible] of [illegible] Valley Compan[illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

ASTORIA, June [illegible].

[illegible] which left [illegible] attend the firemen's tournament here. The [illegible] train which [illegible] East Portland at 10 A. M. consisted of four passenger coaches [illegible] the firemen from Albany and [illegible], the latter department being accompanied by the H. A. [illegible] of Salem [illegible] under the leadership of Prof. J. W. C[illegible] of that city. A large crowd met [illegible] and cheered them [illegible] they pulled out for the lower ferry. A car was attached to the train on which were loaded the hose carts belonging to the Capitals and Tigers, [illegible] recently received from the Silsby Manufacturing Co. of Seneca Falls, New York, [illegible] the handsomest two-wheeled hose cart [illegible]. That owned by the Capitals is [illegible] and racing cart built by [illegible] Hayes of Oakland, California, and [illegible]. [illegible] Albany [illegible] cart, which was taken charge of [illegible] baggage master. Chief Engineer [illegible] of the Albany fire department [illegible] accompanied the boys from that city, and was a leading spirit among them. At the last moment Rescue Hook and Ladder Co. No. 1 of that city gave up going, which will prevent any contest [illegible] service. The main [illegible] of Albany Hose team No. 1 [illegible]—having been so unfortunate at last year's tournament, and being newly organized, naturally expect to capture some of the prizes. The [illegible] friends [illegible] of the fair sex. [illegible] however takes the lead [illegible], having three [illegible] and some seventy five [illegible] friends accompanying them, making [illegible] something [illegible] the H. A. C. band, whose musical [illegible] were a surprise [illegible] with their [illegible]. They occupied seats on the after deck [illegible] their friends with an open air concert, the selections being of a high order and [illegible]. Among those from Salem were Hon. T. C. Shaw, county judge, Hon. Andrew Kelly, ex-mayor, and other leading citizens, who in their interest in fire matters accompanied the firemen to witness the contests. Capital Hose team No. 1, who having tied their competitors in the championship race in Salem two years ago and at the Albany tournament in 1884 won the race, ever [illegible] competitors are this year in better trim than ever before and confidently expect to lower their record of 44¼ and retain if possible their championship laurels. Having, however, won and earned honors in the past, they realize fully the fact that every hose company in the race is camping on their trail, and their race being a difficult one to win under existing circumstances, a new track, new water facilities, a plank roadway to run upon and other difficulties to overcome, they will watch carefully every point and will endeavor to sustain their reputation as one, at least, of the crack hose teams of the state. The Tigers, with their new and elegant cart and a good team, are prepared to enter the race well heeled, and if they do not carry off some of the prizes it will not be from any lack of diligence on their part. Of Salem Hose Team No. 3, it can only be said that they are a fine looking body of men, who by persistent drill have made themselves very proficient and will no doubt make a good record, with an equal chance of winning their share of the honors. The Astoria teams are in perfect trim, and possessing as they do the advantage of a thorough knowledge of the ground, the capacity of their water power, and being familiar with the knack of traveling over plank roadways, will make dangerous competitors. They were foemen worthy of the steel of champions at the last tournament and confidently expect to better their record at this. It is however generally supposed that the Astoria firemen are interested more especially in the New York contest and will use all honorable means to take the lead therein.

The Eugene hose team, which arrived here on the early morning boat, is one of very fair promise and has, it is whispered around, made some excellent time in practice. They are, however, unknown to fame as yet and have their record to make, but their friends appear perfectly content with their chances of success and the boys have not come down here for pleasure alone. They mean business and will improve every opportunity that will lead to success.

The steamer contest will lie between the two Astoria companies, there being no machines here from abroad. The prize for the hook and ladder contest will under the rules of the association revert to the association, there being but one company entered. The Albany boys will enter a team for the make and break coupling contest, as may also other departments, but they will have lively competitors from the home department and the chances are the prizes offered will not leave the city by the sea. The firemen's foot race excites considerable interest not only with the boys who "run with the machine," but outsiders as well. The Astoria boys are enthusiastic over George Noland and Pete Grant, while Dick Patton and T. A. Howard and George S. Wright are favorites with the Salem department. Noland was generally conceded the favorite until this morning when it was whispered around that Wm. Martin, the spurt runner from McMinnville, was with the crowd from that city, and intended to enter for the race. Should such be the case a lively race is expected.

The run down the river was a pleasant one, and thoroughly enjoyed by all on board, many of whom were making their first trip down the Columbia. The conviviality of those on board, the grandeur of the scenery, the comforts afforded us by the officers of the boat, the exquisite music of the band all combined in making the trip enjoyable. The dinner hour was a busy one. Three tables were set before the crowd could be accommodated and keen appetites were the rule rather than the exception. The gallant steamer made excellent time, reaching the dock at 4:45.

The Astoria fire department and Eugene team were drawn up in lines on the wharf to receive the visiting firemen. Chief Engineer Joe Charters and Assistant Engineer J. Thomas came on board and welcomed them. A procession was formed and the visitors escorted to their quarters. The streets are gaily decorated with flags, evergreens and Chinese lanterns and crowded with citizens.

The remaining passengers made for the Occident and regaled themselves on the clams, Columbia river shad and other good things provided by mine host Megler. The different teams were out this evening exercising on Squemoqua street, and such an exhibition of racing and running has never before been seen here.

Tomorrow the State Firemen's Association will meet at 10 A. M., and there will be a grand parade at 1 P. M.

The Casino Company opened this evening at Ross' opera house, to a large audience.

GOLDENDALE NOTES

GOLDENDALE, W. T., June 8.

W. A. Wash expects to leave here about July 1 for his new home at Seattle.

County warrants are much sought after as they are a safe investment, bearing 10 per cent. interest.

Dr. Bonebrake associated with himself a life partner, in the person of Miss L. Flannery. Both parties are well known and respected here, and have the good wishes of the general public to start housekeeping on.

In a recent issue of THE OREGONIAN I noticed an item stating that all the gamblers of Goldendale were arrested and paid their fine. THE OREGONIAN was certainly misinformed, as Goldendale never was troubled with that class of people.

Hon. Sol Hirsch of Portland paid a visit to his nephew, Mr. S. Sichel, during the past week. Mr. Hirsch expressed himself very favorably impressed with the general appearance of our town and surrounding country. During his short stay here he was shown marked attention by all of the prominent citizens.

COURT NOTES.

Judge Smith will call the docket in department No. 1 of the state circuit court on Saturday and set down cases for trial.

Charles R. Lloyd, who was arrested on a charge of kidnapping his brother-in-law's children, yesterday had the case against him dismissed.

William Allman, who sues A. Dotta for $224 alleged to be due for services rendered in the latter's restaurant, presented his case to a jury in the state circuit court. A verdict has not yet been reached.

The case of White, Goldsmith & Co. vs. Bernhard Goldsmith was on trial yesterday before Judge Stearns and a jury, as to a question of fact in an equity case. It is seldom that equity cases are brought before juries, but this is one of the exceptions.

McClellan and Hancock

General Hancock and General McClellan were quiet observers of a political turnout in New York one night recently. Of course they were in plain clothes. As they stood in the shadow of a portico, they suddenly became to a slight extent, objects of interest themselves. And they had reason to know, too, that they were not awe-inspiring in civilian dress.

"There's General McClellan!" exclaimed a probable veteran.

"Wot're ye givin' us?" retorted an incredulous girl. "That sawed-off chump General McClellan! Guess not, cully."

"The big un's General Hancock," said a Bowery boy aloud.

His best girl was with him. She stopped close in front of Hancock, flung her bang aside by a saucy shake of her head, so as to look up clear-eyed into his face, surveyed his bulk coolly for a moment, and then said, "Sa-ay, why don't you get back to your museum?"
